1. Introduction

The investigation by BAASS provided new lines of evidence showing that the UFO phenomenon was a lot more than nuts and bolts machines that interacted with military aircraft. The phenomenon also involved a whole panoply of diverse activity that included bizarre creatures, poltergeist activity, invisible entities, orbs of light, animal and human injuries and more. The exclusive focus on nuts and bolts machines could be considered myopic and unproductive in solving the larger mystery of UFOs.

Excerpt from Statement from a Senior Manager of BAASS (BAASS = Bigelow Aerospace Advanced Space Studies)

This text is largely about the UFO phenomenon in all its complex diversities. It is primarily intended to show that the beings responsible for its manifestations come from a subtle dimension next to our physical world. This reasoning is based on physical evidence. We can deduce the nature of these beings and their intentions from their appearances and actions. The exact identity of the beings can only be speculated at because of their elusiveness. In all likelihood they have been living here on Earth, in their dimension, and they have also been appearing in our dimension, for a very long time. In my opinion the entities responsible for the UFO phenomenon in all its aspects are human thought-forms that gained consciousness and independence a long time ago. They were created consciously and unconsciously. Even today, many people, by their belief system, maintain their existence and determine the form in which they appear to us at times. This might seem strange to you, therefore go read my article of Physical Manifestations of Thought Forms and Artificial Elementals. There are also other etheric or astral beings who can interfere with our lives. I group them all under the term dimensional beings.

Those beings, being artificially formed, need energy to sustain their existence. This energy they can only obtain from humans. That is why those dimensional beings clearly show hostility towards humans, in contrast to what many UFO enthusiasts believe. Their actions are often deceptive, misleading, and in many cases harmful and even deadly.

The dimensional beings have learned to appear in forms that we humans expect them to have. Over the last century, the belief in extraterrestrial visitations have sky rocketed, and thus they often appear in flying saucers and in the guise of aliens. When they work in groups, they can use their own form of dimensional energy-technology, and they use other lower- consciousness-beings to execute their agendas.

This text is an overview of the evidence gathered by many researchers, and some speculations. Therefore let the evidence speak to you, and use the speculation to form your opinion.

Each topic could be expanded a lot more. The information is out there, you just have to read it. This overview ties together the many different aspect of the phenomenon. Too many UFO researchers limit themselves to a narrow belief system, and ignore so many other important details. I did add some accounts to illustrate the topics in order to show that the phenomenon is quite real.

Nowadays many people think that there are only Greys abducting humans for the purpose of the creation of hybrids, but this is only a minority of the UFO and strange entity encounters. Besides, most of this is based on hypnosis accounts and channeling, which is unreliable, often creates false memories, and leads to unfounded beliefs. In my opinion, the abductions are only the product of false memories obtained under hypnosis, by hypnotists fueled by self-interests. This also means that the whole hybrid genetic manipulation is also non-existent. Read the book The Greys Have Been Framed: Exploitation in the UFO Community by Jack Brewer.

The real physical experiences, effects and the various phenomena are much more interesting to gain a wider view of the UFO phenomenon, and it allows us to get a better understanding of what is going on.

I have been reading up on the UFO phenomenon for a long time, trying to understand what is going on, who those beings are and what their intention is. Most people have a superficial idea about UFOs and aliens, because they only read or watch mainstream information, and they hold on to a very simple explanation: aliens are physical extraterrestrials who are visiting Earth. It is a lot more complicated than that. It is the same with their intentions.

I do accept that extraterrestrial physical intelligent non-human beings from somewhere else in the galaxy or cosmos know how to travel in space by moving their ship to a higher state of energy potential (spin), by which they can breach distance in no time, or very little time. However physical ETs, cannot walk on our planet without a space suit because of the different atmospheric gases, gravity, sun radiation, and microbial life (diseases). Yet the aliens that have been witnessed all over the planet never wore a protective suit. This very simple fact seem to have missed by so many researchers and by those who believe that these beings are extraterrestrials. Why do abductees, who firmly believe that the alien abductors are extraterrestrials, never mention that the aliens do not wear protective space suits? If their abduction is a physical reality, and since they are together with the aliens inside their spaceship, how can they breathe the alien atmosphere/gases? They never mention that the gravity inside the spaceship is different from Earth's gravity, something one would immediately notice when walking around. And, all the microbes that the abductee harbors will be freely passed on to the aliens in such an enclosed space, and vice versa. None of the abductee ever caught an alien microbe/disease. That is something to think about, because abductees don't like to question their own experience.

Various (low-spiritual) ethereal or astral beings who reside on this planet have the ability to shortly lower their vibration and have a visible presence in our physical reality, or they can be accidentally visible at certain energy spots (vortexes). They have the ability to assume any form they want, and thus they can show themselves as a typical Grey, for example, or a blue alien, or a green Martian. This would explain why there are so many different aliens being seen, literally hundreds and hundreds different shapes, sizes and colors. All without a space suit.

This brings us to the most important feature in all those contacts. The key feature in almost all contacts is the manipulation of the human mind/brain. It is the most worrisome and the most dangerous. It starts before the sighting itself, when a person feels impelled to go outside the house, to drive to a certain location. When a flying saucer is seen, or lands, the person goes into a trance, walks up to the vehicle. Sometimes the person feels 'paralyzed', he can't move. Being 'paralyzed' is common in the bedroom when the aliens appear. The person can feel himself be floated out of the house, or he walks outside the house against his will.

It should also be investigated if what the witnesses experience, reflects a real experience or was it all projected into their mind by those dimensional beings.

As a side note: have you ever wondered why the aliens fly around in brightly illuminated vehicles with flashing lights? What do you do when you see such a vehicle at night? You are amazed, you fix your gaze on it, you get excited. This creates an intense energy beam directed towards that vehicle, and this gets picked up by the alien beings. "Oh, there is another human we can reel in!". In so many cases the vehicle heads directly to the witness, followed by missing time. Actually it is not time that was missing, he cannot remember what happened during the many hours that passed by. It is not that their vehicle emits these lights as part of their technology. They can easily turn these lights off. The lights are meant to attract attention, and the flashing lights put you in a light hypnotic state. It is like a fisherman who throws out his line with bright colored ribbons on the hooks.

I think this is why sometimes, aliens, Sasquatch, and certain dimensional beings appear with bright self-illuminated red or orange eyes (especially at night). It is meant to attract your attention, and to bring you into a light hypnotic state by which they can then easily bring you into a deeper trance and manipulate your mind at will. Sasquatch is also known to manipulate the mind of people, although he does not do this with malicious intent. He projects fear or unease into the person, so he would leave the area. Or, he projects the sound of heavy footsteps closing in on the tent in which the person is sleeping.

Mind communication is actually common in the universe. It might sound strange, because mankind does not have this ability. Actually, we do have it, but it is only latent. It is turned off. When we learn how to use it and train ourselves to develop this ability, we then call it magic. Those who use it to manipulate others without permission, for their own selfish purposes, are called black magicians. In a positive way, this mind to mind connection is used for telepathy and for healing. Spiritually developed beings communicate this way across the universe. Some physical extraterrestrials on other planets do communicate this way with spiritual people on this planet. They do not need to come here physically. They can not only talk telepathically with people, but they can also project an image of themselves into the mind of the person, or symbols, or visual messages.

That is why I consider the alien races of the Greys, Reptilians and Mantis as spiritually inferior to humans, because by their constant mind manipulation, they violate not only our privacy, and free will, but most important, also our mind, our emotions and also our bodies. For these races, their contact with humans is always about control and manipulation.

It should also be mentioned that some people have had contacts with beings who totally respect our free will, and privacy.

The only way to counteract these manipulative contacts is to be vigilant in your awareness, especially when you spend time in the woods, and to be constantly aware of any outside manipulation of your mind, emotions and body. Discernment is the key.

It is time that people start to take these strange encounters serious and look further into it.

Throughout the ages there has been the phenomenon of strange beings manifesting and manipulating humans has shown to have the ability to change its manifestations according the belief system of the people. In past ages, there was the Wild Man, the tall blond elves, and small gnomes, who all toyed with people and at times abducted them to their realm. In the late 1800s we had sightings of airships, piloted by oriental looking people. Then strange aircraft doing impossible maneuvers. When science and astronomy made headway, tall blond human looking beings showed up, stepping out from flying saucers, claiming to be from Venus or some other planet in our solar system. Channeling of these extraterrestrials took off. Some contactees were taken for tour in our solar system, or some other distant planet in the universe.

In other words, it seems that the phenomenon creates scenery and narratives that are mere theater. One needs to look beyond the curtain.

2. Definition of Terms

If there is one thing that is consistent in esoteric or alternative fields, it is that there is no consistency in the terms they use. So I will have to define the terms I am using in regard to our subject. To avoid going into a complex list of terminology, I will it simple. The reader can always go into the appropriate literature to find out more.

Dimensionals: these are beings that reside in another dimension(s). It is generally held that besides our physical dimension, there are more subtle dimensions that are made up of substance that vibrate at such higher frequencies that they are not visible to us and not accessible for our physical bodies. Esoteric teachings have given them different names, such as etheric, ethereal, astral and mental realms. I am not going to differentiate between all these levels. For the purpose of this article it is only necessary to point out that there are beings living on 'higher' planes that are situated here on this planet. They are not higher in the normal sense, they are actually all interpenetrating, and thus all around us.

Beings: these dimensional beings are manifold, come in many shapes and forms, with different ways of appearing. One can find descriptions in mythology, legends, historical accounts and present-day experiences.

Intrusion: the activity of the dimensional who have the means to appear in our physical dimension for a short period. I use the word 'intrusion' because they not merely appear in our world but actively interfere with our lives without our consent, and usually it is to our detriment.

Terrestrial: all these beings are terrestrials, that is, they live on this planet Earth, but in the other dimensions that are parallel to our physical dimension. They always have been here, or at least for a very long time. Some of them pretend to come from other planets, and present themselves as extraterrestrials in their flying saucers, but that is only because we would like to believe so. The majority of the so-called aliens are actually deceiving dimensionals.

Ufonauts: this is an older term for the UFO occupants, that is more neutral than the now more popular term aliens. In the last century many UFO occupants appeared as dwarfs and other weird looking beings, and did not necessary suggest that they came from outer space. The identification of certain beings with Greys and their assumed extraterrestrial origin came later and started an elaborate belief system that is not backed up by real experiences.

3.1 The Fairies of Old

Some researchers have pointed out that modern day sightings and experiences with alleged extraterrestrials, aliens, and many other weird beings are just the same as the age old experiences with fairies, angels and demons. The names differ and the appearances are slightly different to accommodate our modern society, but the experiences remain the same.

The old tales have now been discarded as children's fairy-tales, legends and myths, of which our learned scientists and professors tell us that it is all just fantasy. Outside their offices, laboratories and universities, the dimensional beings of old continue to enter our lives and scare the crap out of us. There is indeed nothing new on this planet.

People have always experienced revelations, insights and journeys through contact with angels, demons, and now spacemen. The messages conveyed by these entities are always the same, no matter what frame of reference is being used. Aliens don't tell us anything new.

In ufology, some people are unaware of the history of dimensional beings appearing in our world. They think that UFOs are extraterrestrials who are (recently) visiting us from other planets. Some now also accept that they are dimensional beings, but still coming from other planets.

Although the possibility of real extraterrestrial beings coming here exists, the historical UFO phenomenon shows us something quite different. It is important to keep the evolution of their intrusion into our world in mind, because behind the changing forms they use, they are the same beings. The UFO phenomenon has become very popular but is merely a recent adaption of their appearance. They also continue to appear in their more traditional forms too, all over the planet.

The dimensional beings are of various kinds, and appear in different ways when entering our physical dimension. When we talk about UFOs and their occupants, then we are primarily dealing with a certain group that have always been seen 'flying' around in luminous or physical-looking 'vehicles'. It is in this regard that we speak of a history in their appearance.

3.2. Historical Sightings of Ships in the Air

In recorded history, ships sailing through the air have been briefly mentioned in some texts. The record keepers of their time often heard these stories from other people. They didn't pay much attention to these stories, partly because intellectuals have always been skeptical of such sightings, and the authorities were not much interested in it either.

In more recent history there have been some better descriptions of such sightings. It is clear that occasionally people did see wooden ships sailing through the air, in detail, and sometimes witnessed by multiple people.

From our present point of view, it sounds ridiculous that anyone would see a wooden ship sailing through the air above tree tops or above fields or houses. But a flying saucer hovering above your house is normal? Both are vehicles whose shape correspond with what an ordinary person would expect them to be according to the time period in which he lives. Both the wooden ships and the metal-looking saucers are mere projected holograms or materialized forms by the dimensional beings. They are dimensional vehicles but they can be shaped in any form they like. So they choose a form of a moving vehicle that we humans are familiar with. A wooden ship sailing through the air is strange but the ship itself is a familiar form for people from the past centuries. The dimensional beings always use elements of familiarity (for us humans) in their appearances.

One of such familiarities is the air ship's anchor that appears in several accounts, even in the new airship wave of the late 1800s that we will talk about later.

The Airship Anchors

An ordinary person might be startled to see a wooden ship sailing in the air above him. When that ship drops an anchor, it is even weirder to us, but this is a reasonable action that its occupants would take. After all, that is what normal ships would do. It also strengthens the idea that there is indeed a (apparent) physical ship in the sky. The anchor is part of providing physical proof to the humans on the ground, or making them believe that it is all physical.

Here are some examples of such events, showing that this really happened, although the question remains why such sightings happen.

In a 13th century Irish manuscript, the Speculum Regali (an educational text from around 1250), there is a remarkable account of a ship hanging in the air, dropping an anchor. This story is mentioned by John Keel and other writers, but I went to the original (translated) text, where the author added an additional story. Source: [The King's Mirror \(Speculum regale-Konungs skuggsjá\) (translated from Old Norwegian by Laurence Marcellus Larson Professor of History at the University of Illinois, 1917), page 116-117.]:

There happened something once in the borough called Cloena,} which will also seem marvelous. In this town there is a church dedicated to the memory of a saint named Kiranus. One Sunday while the populace was at church hearing mass, it befell that an anchor was dropped from the sky as if thrown from a ship; for a rope was attached to it, and one of the flukes of the anchor got caught in the arch above the church door. The people all rushed out of the church and marveled much as their eyes followed the rope upward. They saw a ship with men on board floating before the anchor cable; and soon they saw a man leap overboard and dive down to the anchor as if to release it. The movements of his hands and feet and all his actions appeared like those of a man swimming in the water. When he came down to the anchor, he tried to loosen it, but the people immediately rushed up and attempted to seize him. In this church where the anchor was caught, there is a bishop's throne. The bishop was present when this occurred and forbade his people to hold the man; for, said he, it might prove fatal as when one is held under water. As soon as the man was released, he hurried back up to the ship; and when he was up the crew cut the rope and the ship sailed away out of sight. But the anchor has remained in the church since then as a testimony to this event.

In this story we also see that the occupant who came down the rope appeared to be swimming. Again, that is what people would expect a shipmate to do to release an anchor because he would be under water. This is imitation of what would be considered normal. The anchor is added to the air ship's sighting, by the dimensional beings, to provide 'proof' to the townspeople to make them believe that what they were seeing was a physical reality: there are people living in the air, or the atmosphere, and they travel through the skies in ships. At least that is what they are led to believe.

There is no difference between this and the present-day supposedly existence of aliens cruising our skies in metal disk-like ships.

Professor Larson gives the following footnote to this account of which he thinks is a version of the same story, but it might be another event:

In the Irish Nennius (211-213) the following version of this tale appears. "Congalach, son of Maelmithig, was at the fair of Teltown on a certain day, when he saw a ship (sailing) along in the air. One of the crew cast a dart at a salmon. The dart fell down in the presence of the gathering, and a man came out of the ship after it. When he seized its end from above, a man from below seized it from below. Upon which the man from above said: 'I am being drowned,' said he. 'Let him go,' said Congalach; and he is allowed to go up, and then he goes from them swimming." The translation is by Kuno Meyer: riu, IV, 13. Congalach was an Irish king (944-956); Teltown is in county Meath. The legend is alluded to in Reliquiae Antiquae, II, 105, with some difference in details.

Here again the man from the ship alludes to being under water.

The Otia Imperialia, an early 13th-century Latin encyclopedic work, written by Gervase of Tilbury (1150–1220) contains an interesting story, of which the English translation can be found in The Otia Imperialia of Gervase of Tilbury - A Detailed Survey, by Bryan A. Wilkinson, published by the Trinity College (Dublin, Ireland). Department of History, 1966, page 88:

There is an interesting and rather peculiar account in the Otia of the "Supereminetia" of the sea. It is an extraordinary tale of a sea either in or above the atmosphere. To prove it he tells how in his time some people coming out of a church in England found an anchor let down by a rope out of the heavens, how there came voices from sailors above trying to loose the anchor, and finally, how a sailor came down the rope, who, on reaching the earth, died as if drowned in water.

There were probably more sightings of ships sailing through the air that were never recorded, because to the scribes of past centuries such stories would be too ridiculous or not important to write down in their history books.

When the wooden sail ships ceased to be seen, and gave way to a new form of airships in the late 1800s, there was still a sighting of an anchor dropping by such a technological advanced airship. The following account has been mentioned in abbreviated form in fortean books. I have looked up the original story in the newspaper of the Houston Daily Post of April 28, 1897, page 5:

Anchor of the Airship

Said to be on Exhibition at Merkel, attracting much attention.

Merkel, Texas, April 26 - Some parties returning from church last night noticed a heavy object dragging along with a large rope attached. They followed it until in crossing the railroad it caught on a rail. On looking up they saw what they supposed was the airship. It was not near enough to get an idea of the dimensions. A light could be seen protruding from several windows: one bright light in front like the headlight of a locomotive. After some ten minutes a man was seen descending the rope; he came near enough to be plainly seen; he wore a blue sailor suit, was small in size. He stopped when he discovered parties at the anchor and cut the rope below him and sailed off in the northeast direction.

The anchor is now on exhibition at the blacksmith shop of Elliot & Miller and is attracting the attention of hundreds of people.

Attention is what it is all about, and once again the anchor was provided to maintain the belief system that there were now strange technological advanced airships flown around by inventors. This way the real ufonauts remained hidden. They probably got (stole) the anchor from somewhere else for their performance in Houston. To ordinary people it would seem logical that a zeppelin-looking airship needs an anchor on a rope because a zeppelin was anchored with ropes. A zeppelin was not fastened with a real anchor, but the association with a ship would create the need for a real anchor, as the ufonauts have been doing in the past. Hence also the navy suit of the crew member. It is about making associations with existing ideas that exists in the mind of ordinary people.

We can go a little further with the need for an anchor as proof. Why did they choose an anchor? We have three stories of airships which let down an anchor at a church in front of churchgoers. That cannot be a coincidence but an intentional display with a meaning. In the first place, a church is an institution of a belief system. The ufonauts always instill a certain belief system in the witnesses. They make them believe in something that is not real. Why would the ufonauts resort to dropping an anchor in front of a church? Well, the anchor is an old emblem used by the Catholic Church symbolizing hope. Coincidence? I don't think so. The ufonauts know what they are doing. Ufonauts love symbols.

Let us not forget that the church building itself has a direct analogy with a ship. The area between the entrance and the sanctuary (altar) was called the 'nave' This word comes from the Latin navis, or ship, and was meant to portray the reality that the Church is a ship, protecting those inside it from the waves and buffets of the world. Architecturally, many artists would make this analogy even more visible by constructing the ceiling over the nave in a vaulted fashion, exposing the wooden beams, which resembled the reversed look of a ship's keel. Furthermore, inside the nave can sometimes be found a pulpit that is made to look like a ship. This accents the symbolism and visibly puts the priest as the pilot of the congregation, leading them to distant shores.

Forget coincidences, the ufonauts are very familiar with human concepts. The question remains: why do they need to create such a charade? What's the purpose of it all?

Here are two more accounts of wooden airships I found, taken from original accounts:

In Ireland, ships sailing in the air were seen as far back as the 12th century. In the book *A chorographical description of West or H-Iar Connaught* by O'Flaherty, Roderic, 1629-1718, page 31, the appearance of what they called 'fantastical ships' were mentioned as a sign of impending disaster. The one line sentence is followed by a more extensive note trying to explain the sighting as a mere meteorological phenomenon:

Anno 1161, fantastical ships were seen in the harbour of Galway Dun to saile against the wind, and the next day Galway Dun tooke fire.

The note:

Fantastical ships. Our annalists, in recording this occurrence, call these ships loinger demnocdo, which Dr. O'Conor translates, " Naves bellicae," Four Masters, p. 807. This does not, however, convey the meaning of demnocdo, which literally signifies devilish or diabolical, from deomon (demon), the evil spirit. But our author's phrase, "fantastical ships" (viz., visionary, or having the appearance of a phantom, not real), was happily chosen to express this instance of atmospherical refraction. The writer remembers to have seen, when a boy, a well-defined aerial phenomenon of this kind, from a rising ground near the mountain of Cruach-Patrick, in Mayo. It was on a serene evening in the autumn of 1798. Hundreds who also witnessed the scene believed it supernatural ; but it was soon afterwards found to have been caused by the fleet of Admiral "Warren, then off the west coast of Ireland.

In 1743, an English farmer and his wife saw a ship sailing through the sky at an altitude of a quarter of a mile. The ship looked like the familiar packet-boats that sailed between Holyhead (Wales) and Ireland, in every detail. The farmer added to his account that he had seen the same thing ten years earlier at the same place, and another one ten years before that. This supports the idea that UFO sightings often occur at particular places and at regular intervals. This regularity certainly has occurred at other locations with the more recent UFO and flying saucer sightings.

From The Wynford Vaughan-Thomas The Shell Guide to Wales (Michael Joseph Ltd, 1969):

"Near the town of Holyhead lies Peibio, the scene of a recurrent phenomenon, well confirmed by contemporary evidence, that perplexed the sages of the 18th century, as much as it does those of our own day. Some time in 1743, Lewis Morris, an experienced mining engineer, master of many languages and eminent antiquarian, had a report from Anglesey. This was made by a farmer whose steading lay near Peibio, a little place only a stone's throw from Holyhead. "Plowing" (as it was written) "with his servant boy in ye fields", he saw bearing down upon him a ship of 90 tons, rigged like a ketch, with its fore-tack at the cat-head and its pennant and "antient" flying. The day was described as indifferent and cloudy, but the detail of the ship could be clearly seen. It was "coming from ye mountains of Snowdon", not by sailing on the waves around Holy Island, but moving "about a Quarter of a mile High from ye Ground". The farmer called his wife. She ran from the farmhouse in time to see the ship in the sky retreating, its pennant lowered to the deck and all sails furled. It was steering "stern foremost", making for whence it had come, the mountains of Snowdonia. Lewis Morris was not a man to leave such a thing unconfirmed. He hastened to Holyhead and interviewed first the wife and then the husband, separately. Neither had any doubt about the circumstances. The wife had not acquaintance with sea terms, but was quite sure of what she had seen; her only doubt was what the neighbours might think if she allowed Lewis Morris to publish the affair. Lewis Morris found the husband at an inn, visiting Holyhead on farm business. He had no doubt that the man was sober and sincere, with no trace of the "melancolick" disposition that might have led him to exaggerate or imagine. The ship had been plain to see, exact in every detail; the keel could be observed from below; the sails were distended with the wind; when the foresail was lowered it hung in a natural way over bow. In the end a cloud hid the vessel from sight, but not before the farmer, his wife, and his boy had had their observation supported by a flock of birds that assembled to examine the phenomenon and flew round it from all directions. When the vessel began its backward journey, the birds with one accord flew from it northwards in the opposite direction. What finally persuaded Lewis Morris was the way in which the farmer - whose name, William John Lewis, is worth recording - assured him that he had seen another such ship exactly ten years earlier in much the same place, and that, ten years before then again, he had seen just such another. The ships were in each case very like the old packet-boats that plied between Holyhead and Ireland; the very ropes of the rigging could be counted one by one. Lewis Morris was afraid that this series of phenomena foreboded some great calamity, and he strove to remember events corresponding with the ten-year intervals. His letter about this matter is hurried, not to say startled, and is either written from or addressed to the Ship Hotel in Dolgelly (as he spells the name of the town). What attracts the modern inquirer is the recurrence of the visitation at such regular dates. No explanation can be found in early attempts at balloon travel; the first aeronaut to use this means was Montgolfier, and he did not make his first flight until fifty years later. The modern method of communication between earth and outer space is by flying saucer; and the appearance of these vehicles is also at regular intervals of ten years. It seems that extra-terrestrial visitors move with the times and have abandoned "Holyhead Packet boats" for more advanced methods of flight. But, since the hill at Holyhead is the only height in Anglesey to face the distant loftiness of Snowdon, some trick of refraction may have been responsible for picking up vessels plying the Menai Straits and setting them, pennant and antient and all, to steer the skies above Peibio."

3.3. The Airships of the late 1800s

On November 18, 1896 an airship flew over the city of Sacramento, California, that was witnessed by hundreds of people. Here you can find the front page article of The San Francisco Call newspaper with an extensive description of what people saw.

The next year an airship was seen in Arkansas. Judge Lawrence A. Byrne was, to quote a reporter for the Daily Texarkanian, Texarkana, Arkansas, "known here for his truthfulness by his fellowmen." On April 25, 1897, that paper published this amazing story:

I was down on McKinney bayou Friday looking after the surveying of a tract of land and, in passing through a thicket to an open space, saw a strange-looking object anchored to the ground. On approaching I found it to be the airship I have read so much about of late. It was manned by three men who spoke a foreign language, but judging from their looks, would take them to be Japs. They saw my astonishment and beckoned me to follow them, and on complying, I was shown through the ship. The judge then explained "about the machinery being made of aluminum and the gas to raise and lower the monster was pumped into an aluminum tank when the ship was to be raised and let out when to be lowered." There is no further description in the account. The most interesting thing about this story is that the judge mistook the pilots for Japanese, perhaps meaning that they were small men with Oriental features similar to the men described in the controversial modern contact story of Betty and Barney Hill. (Why UFOs, by John Keel, p.70)

In the late 1800s wonderful airships appeared in the skies. They looked a little bit like zeppelins, but were more ornate, made of wood and metal. They still looked similar to an ordinary ship, but sometimes had artificial wings and other mechanical constructions. Mystery airships were also seen early on in the 1900s.

In the 1890s there were only a handful experimental airships which were capable of low speed, and they a limited range of at most a few miles. In July 1900 the first Zeppelin took to air. It is important to know that in the 1880 several inventors were already working on the concept of airships or zeppelins. In the UFO phenomenon we often see that the dimensional beings know what is in the mind of humans and use this to appear in our world.

Mystery airships appear in 1896 and early 1897 and were mostly reported in newspapers of the western United States. However they were also seen in other parts of the world, in at least fifteen countries. At the time there was actually little attention given to these sightings, until the sightings became more numerous. These airships, although similar to what was on the drawing table of inventors, were quite different in appearance. They looked like very advanced technological constructions, from the point of view of what the general population could imagine.

The airships were not all the same. Each one was different, the occupants were different, and their appearance was different. In other words, each case was unique. But there are commonalities that point to the fact that these airships were not the constructions of certain inventors, but of one and the same group of dimensional beings.

As it is always the case in Ufology, most of these sightings and interactions with people were not coincidental but carefully planned.

These dimensional beings appeared in such a way that they wanted humans to believe that these airships were very advanced aerial craft made by intelligent inventors who were flying the around the country at enormous speed, and even around the world. For this purpose the airships displayed fantastic designs, and occasionally an airship landed, and their occupants chatted with the astonished witnesses.

UFO researcher John Keel makes the interesting statement that sightings of airships were always followed by a UFO flap, that is, sightings of flying light spheres at night, emitting light beams. The light spheres and light beams is a feature that is constant throughout the centuries. It is the physical-looking vehicles that changes from time to time. The two are strongly linked together. The light spheres seem to be engaged in certain activities, while the physical-looking ships seem to be decoys to have people belief in something that is not true and deviate their attention away from what the dimension beings are really doing, and/or from their true identity. In other words, a magician's trick: look at my right hand so you don't see what my left hand is doing. When people saw a light sphere at night they assumed it was 'just' an airship from a crazy inventor. This is the assumption that John Keel made. In reality we don't know why they are so elusive in their light sphere forms, and so openly visible in their physical ship-forms.

Another interesting feature in regard to carefully planning the stage, is that the airship sightings at the end of the 1800's and also the second wave in the beginning of the 1900's, were preceded by the public statement of a human inventor who claimed that he had built an advanced airship and was flying around in it. These two inventors were actually some kind of front men for the phenomenon and they had prior knowledge of the impending flap. Their statements however were not quite realistic. When pressed for further information, the first inventor vanished. With the second flap, the inventor, was a well-known man, could not provide further information either, and he stopped given any comments.

I wonder why did these men come forward? Were they visited by the real ufonauts and taken for a ride in one of their vehicles, or was a mental manipulation used to make them believe that they had travelled in an advanced airship? Then they were told to pose as inventors and announce the existence of such an airship. When they finally pressed for more information and to back up their claims by hard proof, they were left to defend for themselves, and the only thing they could do would be to withdraw.

In later years many contactees have been used to in a similar manner. They would be told to construct a flying saucer, a healing device etc. but never were able to deliver the promised result. Ufonauts promise a lot but always never fulfill their promises.

The occasional airship landings are all different but interesting in their details. I have mentioned that they were intended to make people believe that these were inventors flying around in their advanced aerial craft. These landings were not accidental, but deliberate. They were staged in relatively remote places and only a few individuals were contacted, telling them the "secret invention" story, and letting them spread the word. Some of the airship occupants had landed to 'repair' their ship. For an ordinary person it makes sense that an advanced craft would land to make repairs.

We see the same thing with the flying saucers in the 1900's. Ufonauts are seen walking around their landed craft using tools to repair their ship, and then suddenly jump into the craft and fly away. It would make sense to ordinary people, but there are so many of these reports, that it is a wonder that the supposedly extraterrestrials made it to Earth at all, when their crafts constantly break down. Unless, of course, it is all staged.

Part of maintaining the inventor-story, are a couple of written messages which were (accidentally?) found, supposedly written by the airship occupants, and some unusual objects (half-peeled potato, a foreign newspaper, a bottle opener) were dropped from the airships too. Later UFOs have continued this trend by dropping of unusual metals.

During these airship waves, there were some other interesting characteristics, that are not that different from later UFO sightings.

The occupants of the airships were often described as dark-eyed gentlemen with high cheekbones and oriental eyes. In later UFO sightings small and tall occupants had the same features. The Men-in-Black are also described as having an olive complexion, and an oriental look. MIB usually appear in threes, and the occupants of the airships often appeared in threes too, but that just a general rule.

At the same time, the dimensional beings built in enough inconsistencies to sow confusion to the situation. Some of the contacted individuals would be told ridiculous things which would discredit not only them but the whole mystery. Knowing how we think and how we search for consistencies, the ufonauts relied on this confusion to eventually debunk the entire phenomena. We see the same thing happening with the later flying saucers and 'extraterrestrials', Greys or otherwise.

3.4. Mystery Airplanes

After the first zeppelins, a new way of air travel was invented: airplanes. With it mystery airplanes appeared. Ufonauts changed the form in which to appear from airships to strange airplanes.

There was a big mystery airplane flap in 1934, but sightings continued throughout the decades afterwards.

When the very first crude airplanes were tested and flown, a new UFO flap occurred. Although international law required all aircraft to bear identifying markings and license numbers on their wings, tails, and fuselages, none of these mystery airplanes bothered to comply. They were usually a dull gray or black in color and they displayed no insignia of any kind.

They were seen flying very low at night in UFO flap areas, and the pilot's cabin was usually brightly illuminated. Conventional planes flying at night do not have brightly illuminated cockpits because it would interfere with the pilot's night vision. The brightly illuminated cockpits can only have one function: to make sure they are noticed.

Like the airships before, these mysterious airplanes were seen all over the world. Although they looked like the conventional planes of the time, they were significantly different and anomalous. They could have an unusually long fuselage. Airplanes with delta wings were seen, which were far too short to support a craft of its size. They would move very slowly, too slowly to stay aloft. They would make impossible maneuvers. They would glide, rather than fly. Sometimes they would fly over in total silence.

Some planes were seen with a red glow surrounding them. As a side note: a colored glow is often seen with sightings of UFOs, monsters and other strange beings. It points to an otherworldly origin.

Like the airships before and the flying saucers later on, on a rare occasion a mystery airplane landed and a witness was able to inspect it closely.

A very strange report of a landed mystery plane appeared in 1965 when Mr. Hertzke was horseback riding in a pasture on the Circle Jay Ranch near Calgary in Alberta, Canada. This case was thoroughly investigated and the witness was deemed totally reliable. It was a silver-gray color with swept-back (delta) wings. He estimated that it was about 16 feet long, with a wingspan of about 12 feet, and the fuselage was 4 or 5 feet deep. He rode over to it and examined it cautiously. The exterior, he reported, was irregular "like a waffle." A transparent plastic-like dome covered the cockpit. Through it he could see complicated instruments, a 14-inch "TV screen," and two small, transparent glasslike bucket seats. There were no visible motors, propellers, or jets, and no insignia or identifying marks of any kind. He saw no sign of life around the object, and his work schedule did not permit him to return to it again later for another look. (from Why UFOs, by John Keel, p.114)

What do we make of this? Like so many other landings of airships and flying saucers, this landed airplane was a clear setup, meant to be seen by the witness. It would give him the impression that this mystery airplane must be of an advanced design.

It is not just mysterious single aircraft that were seen. Over the United States whole formations of unidentified delta-winged craft have been spotted. The USA also had numerous sightings of mysterious giant aircraft resembling standard AF "Flying Boxcars" frequently reported in UFO flap areas. They also often performed hazardous low altitude maneuvers. Obviously intended to get noticed.

I remember, when I was a child, in the 1970s, that there were news stories about a mysterious airplane that was flying and circling over the city of Paris, low and with acrobatic stunts ... at night. The authorities could not identify the plane or pilot. It appeared on many night but the pilot was never caught.

In short, the mysterious airplanes were another decoy to direct the attention away from the real activities of the ufonauts. Or are they just making fun of us?

3.5. Radio Signals from Nowhere

This is part of the UFO history too, although it might sound strange to a lot of people. What have radio signals to do with UFO sightings? Ufonauts are inventive beings. One of the ways to draw more attention to their public mysterious aircraft show, is to send out radio messages apparently coming from these craft.

John Keel tells us that during the flap of the mysterious airplanes in 1934, enigmatic radio signals were widely received throughout Sweden and Norway during the flights of the 'ghost fliers'. This was taken seriously by the Swedish Airforce, who were of the opinion that the mystery airplanes were equipped with wireless transmitters and radio navigational aides. They thought the airplanes were part of an extraordinary organization. They were thinking about a human group, possibly from another country, which would have been an illegal incursion into their airspace.

Ordinary people were receiving these radio signals on their home radio, on the wavelengths of certain radio stations. Some messages came over the 900-meter band. Others were received between 230-275 meters. A majority of all the 1934 sightings took place at 6 P.M., no matter where the locale. The flap died down in March, 1934, but there were periodic reports throughout the 1930's. There was another flap in 1936 also with radio signals.

The radio signals are another form of providing proof and maintaining the mystery of the strange airplane sightings. It also shows that the ufonauts can not only create physical (looking) manifestations flying around, but also provide the sound that goes with it. Because they are also apt in the control of energy/vibration/frequency, they can emit radio waves carrying conversations by human voices at the specific frequencies of radio stations people are listening too. All for the purpose of making people believe into something that is not real.

The radio waves or voice phenomenon is also found in the UFO/flying saucer cases. Witnesses have claimed they received strange guttural voices and dot-and-dash signals on car radios, TV sets, and telephones while flying saucers hovered overhead. Citizens' Band (CB) radios also had a habit of picking up these signals in flap areas. On many occasions these voices and sounds have been emitted by loudspeakers which were turned off or weren't even connected. This shows that the ufonauts were directly providing power to these devices.

Keel also notes that in January 1954, people throughout the Midwest allegedly heard a strange voice coming from turned-off radios. The voice stated in a dull monotone: "I wish no one to be afraid, although I speak from space. But if you do not stop preparations for war, you will be destroyed."

On August 3rd, 1958, ham operators throughout the United States picked up a strange broadcast on the seventy-five-meter international band. A male voice claiming to be 'Nacoma from the planet Jupiter' warned his listeners that the atomic bomb tests could lead to disaster. He spoke for two-and-a-half hours in English, German, Norwegian and his own language, described as kind of musical jibberish.

The interest in extraterrestrial visitation was emerging and the ufonauts made use of this interest by claiming that they were aliens concerned about the destructive technological development on this planet. A theme they have used frequently throughout the decades to follow.

Radio amateurs also seem to receive strange messages, and some people claim to have seen images of aliens on their TV.

Keep the humans busy...

3.6. Phantom Helicopters

Technology advances, and with World War II helicopters were developed and became important. The ufonauts had to bring those too into their mystery package. They morph and shape their appearances with the time periods.

Mystery helicopters would usually show up after sightings of light spheres. They would appear immediately after such a sighting, too early for any helicopter from nearby bases to reach the area of the sighting. Their numbers sometimes were larger than any number of helicopters available.

In reality, helicopters are not always on stand by to immediately fly up. Like the airships and airplanes, the mystery helicopters also would fly very low, to be noticed of course.

Ufonauts like numbers when they appear. Sometimes, more than one mystery helicopter shows up, making the sighting more impressive. A formation of seven mystery helicopters, for example, is extremely unusual, but has been seen. Helicopters are also expensive machines and they are difficult to fly. They are not likely to be used to check out an unidentified light, certainly not in numbers.

Black Helicopters

Many abductees or contactees report black military helicopters flying or hovering over their house. They firmly believe that the military is behind this to intimidate or harass them, or plainly check out the flying saucer appearance that just happened at their place. I don't think the military would go to the expense of sending a black helicopter to a house of an ordinary person for whatever reason, and certainly not to hover just over the roof of their house, and endanger a very expensive helicopter, and pilot, for a mission that is absolutely of no interest or profit to the military.

Some mystery black helicopters fly completely silent, just like UFOs and apparent spacecraft. People have seen black helicopters morph into light spheres or flying saucers. This shows that we are dealing with an energy form that can change shape at will.

The appearance of black helicopters have become mainstream in the UFO community. The UFO believers should look into the possibility that these are just another manifestation of the dimensional beings to mess with the minds of the contactees/abductees, or rather one of their ways to intimidate.

It should also be noted that the dimensionals can project the experience of seeing and hearing a black helicopter into the mind of the abductee/contactee. I once read the story of such a contactee who was relaxing on a very populated beach. He saw a black helicopter flying very low over the beach, but could not understand why nobody on the beach looked up, as the helicopter was really loud. Here is another account of a low flying black helicopter that only two people noticed but nobody else:

I was walking outside of a building on the Yale campus with a friend when we heard "chopchopchopchop" loud as hell. I looked up and there was a big black helicopter buzzing us. So close I could have tossed a stone and hit it. There were armed guys in camo hanging out of both sides of it. Damned if I didn't think Red Dawn was happening at that very moment. We were freaked out. Stopped dead in our tracks and both shouted "what the ....." We looked around and everyone else was just walking along chatting on their cell phones and sipping their coffees completely oblivious. The rest of that day I scoured local news outlets and asked friends but apparently we were the only two people who noticed it. If it wasn't for her I'd just assume I was crazy but we both saw it. Middle of the day. Sunny, bright blue sky. I still get chills when I think about it. Like some Twilight Zone episode. And there are no bases anywhere near there. We weren't on drugs or drunk. We aren't suffering from brain tumors or any of the standard write-offs. Freaks me out. Not so much that there was a black helicopter with soldiers buzzing downtown New Haven in the middle of the day only about 30 feet in the air but that nobody else noticed it. It was loud and blowing wind violently in all directions and nobody noticed. (Above Top Secret)

3.7. Flying Saucers

Flying saucers made their entree probably because the military was already testing and flying antigravity craft. Science fiction movies on TV and cinemas might have helped too. The idea of extraterrestrials visiting Earth has existed since the beginning of the 1900s, but became more popular in the second half of the century. Since then we have been hearing a lot of speculation, theories and beliefs about ufonauts being extraterrestrials with specific agendas. It really has developed into an extensive belief system.

One does have to take into account that the sightings of physical looking air vehicles, be it airships, airplanes, helicopters or flying saucers, are actually a minority of the UFO sightings. Most UFO sightings are of light spheres. When they do appear as physical machines, they display an enormous variety. As if each one was custom made. Actually they are, because they are visible manifestation of the thought forms of the dimensional beings. Thus each time, they are going to be different, because they are the product of how these beings envision a flying saucer to be. These vehicle materializations don't have to be physical, but only visible to the witness.

These dimensional beings are also apt at controlling our minds, and thus some, or maybe the majority of the sightings of metal-looking craft, are actually induced mental experiences. That is, the entire sighting is projected into the mind of the witness. To the witness, it is a real experience, but the flying saucer he sees is only in his mind. There is no physical vehicle out there. This also explains that with some sightings, one person sees the UFO and the other person next to him sees nothing.

3.8. Mystery Drones

One wonders, now that we are in an era of air drones, are the ufonauts coming up with a new appearance under the guise of drones? The following article appeared in The Guardian (from the Associated Press) on November 29, 2017:

Mystery drones spotted flying over Paris.

French police investigate after small aircraft seen over tourist sites such as Louvre and Eiffel tower, as well as US embassy.

Drones were seen flying over the Eiffel tower among other locations. Paris police say they have spotted at least five drones flying over the French capital overnight, and an investigation is under way into who was flying them and why. BFM TV reported they were seen flying over the Eiffel tower, the Louvre museum and the US embassy, among other locations. A Paris police official confirmed the presence of the drones in city airspace but would not provide other details. The national gendarme service said an investigation had been launched. In recent months France has seen dozens of mystery drones flying over nuclear plants and military installations. One flew over the presidential palace. French authorities said the drones currently present no threat but the government has asked scientists to help devise ways to counteract the devices. (The Guardian)

UFOs have been flying forever over nuclear plants and military installations. Are the vehicles of the dimensional beings now disguising themselves as mystery drones flying over these installations, or are people just interpreting UFO lights as drones?

Here is a news article, from CBC News (Canada), New Brunswick area, on Fenruari 16, 2019:

Residents unsettled by mystery drones.

Ashley Hoekman has seen drones flying around her house and the surrounding area. People who live in the Bear Island and Lake George area say they are unsettled by the appearance of large drones that have been flying close to their homes for months. Stacey Goodine said she and her husband followed one of the drones recently. "It had a green flashing light on the front and it had two bright white flashing lights on the back," Goodine said. "That night I think we saw like two or three and they get up over our farm in Bear Island and they kind of circle and you can see the lights going." Goodine said the drones have been appearing at night and hovering low over houses and vehicles, but no one seems to know where they are coming from or what they're doing there. "It hasn't done anything to us but we don't know if it's video taping us. That's the creepy part." And she's not alone. In a lengthy thread on Facebook several people say they've seen the same thing. Ashley Hoekman, who lives on Route 610 has also seen the drones. She didn't realize so many other people had too. "Now that I've heard that they're all over the place - directly above people's houses, over my parents' barn, like I don't want somebody videotaping inside my house." She said her husband first noticed them at the end of October and early November. "At that time it was every night," she said.

Hoekman said she has questions about what the drones are doing. "Can it see into my house? Can it see directly into my windows?" "I just think if somebody's flying that stuff around then they should ask people's permission," she said. According to Transport Canada rules, if a drone weighs more than one kilogram, it must stay at least 76 meters away from vehicles and people. Drones can only be flown during the day and must be in plain sight of the operator. Rule breakers can be fined up to $3,000.

Faris Mahboob, who works on and builds drones, says an operator could be as far as two kilometres away. He said this seems like irresponsible use of a drone. "I think people treat them as toys and they don't think of the consequences of flying over people's houses or flying near planes," he said. The neighbours have contacted Transport Canada. They say they were told that without the name of the operator an investigation can't be opened. (CBC News)

This looks more like the typical behavior of UFOs, appearing only at night, colored flashing lights, and appearing in numbers.

4.1. Introduction

I do believe that there is an occult or metaphysical system of control which affects us all. The exact nature and purpose of this system are probably indefinable and certainly incomprehensible. Men have always been aware of it on different levels and have tried to define it—that's what theology is all about—and worship it. To simplify everything in a few words: The intelligence behind this system of control doesn't give a shit about individual human beings. This exposes us to all kinds of manipulations and nonsense from energy forms that have neither intelligence or purpose. They give us witchcraft and Black Magic, Mothmen, Bigfeet, sea serpents, MIBs, etc. thousands of people all over the world have physical experiences with angels every year. There is a scholarly study of these angel cases called aretology. But I'm sure these angels are just variations of the little men that come out of flying saucers and the gigantic, ferocious demons that materialize during magical rites. (John Keel in email to Doug Skinner)

There is a lot in the above quote to ponder. Although Keel was a great investigator and had knowledge of a wide variety of subjects, he still had problems visualizing who was behind of all these manifestations, because of the complexity and the fact that these beings are very keen on hiding their identity. Keel called them Ultraterrestrials, just to keep it kind of neutral, and they seem to come from an unseen dimension right here on Earth.

This Other World, or dimension(s), is populated or used by many different kinds of beings. Here we are paying attention mainly to those who intrude in our reality, and interfere in our lives in a negative way.

As far back as we can trace it, strange beings of all shapes and sizes have been making their appearance in our lives. They show up, often unsuspected, in the woods, at lakes, on roads and in our houses. They fly around in the skies. We have been flabbergasted by their variety, intentions and their nature. We have given them many names, but one thing is for sure. They come from somewhere else. In religious terms, they come from the spiritual world, both the higher and lower worlds. In esoteric terms they come from the ethereal, etheric or astral worlds. If you want to be more general you can say they come from another dimension.

To keep it simple I will use the term other dimension, or dimensional beings. That keeps it simple, and we don't have to worry too much about terminology or descriptions. This other dimension has energies or frequencies that are 'higher', more 'intense'. Scientifically we could say that the spin of matter is higher or has more energy (spinning faster) than the matter in our physical world. All the dimensions interpenetrate each other. That means that they are all here in the same space, but we cannot see or experience them because we are attuned only to the physical world. However, all the dimensions are right here and now.

We can't move into the higher dimensions. Only psychics or clairvoyants are able to use their higher senses to peer into these worlds. Certain hallucinogens will also able you to do the same. However, the dimensional beings are able to enter our physical world. They are able to interact with us, mentally, emotionally and even physically. They can appear visually, and can assume a certain form of physicality. And they like to toy around with humans.

The dimensional beings have been given many names over the centuries. Only in the last century have we given a certain group of them the name of ufonauts and later on aliens or extraterrestrials. The UFO phenomenon is often only seen as extraterrestrial of origin, which it is not. When one starts to take into account all the phenomena associated with so-called UFOs, then one ends up with a large variety of strange beings and characteristics that are quite different from a supposedly physical craft or beings.

It is also important to understand that the majority of strange beings from other dimensions are actually of a low spiritual order. At times they seem to be used by beings of a higher order, but still of dubious intent. These are more structured, organized and purposeful. They might be more intelligent but they are still not beneficial to humans. Because they are so deceitful, one has to pay attention not to what a witness thinks he has experienced, but what really happened to him.

There are also positive encounters with dimensional beings of a high spiritual order. However these are rare. It seems that these beings are often not interested at all in interfering with our lives, unless there is an important or definitive reason to do so.

4.2. Natural and Artificial Elementals

There are so many strange entities, from ghosts to monsters and aliens, that it brings up the question "Where do they all come from?" The answer is found in the dimension that lies just 'behind' the physical world. The dimensional entities that occasionally enter our physical world mostly come from the lowest astral plane, that is sometimes called the etheric dimension. This etheric world is closely connected to the physical world; it actually lies at the basis of the formation of the physical world. Here we find the traditional Elementals, associated with the four elements of Earth, Water, Air and Fire. The etheric world is also home to other kinds of beings.

Nature Elementals

I'll preface this by saying that I'm not religious or anything and, until this experience, I wouldn't have believed what I'm about to tell you. My buddy and I were about 19 at the time. We lived with our parents while attending community college. As such, when we wanted to smoke weed, we had to go elsewhere. We liked this spot down by the river that runs through our city. It's a slightly woody spot down a small game trail to the river. It was probably 10pm but there was plenty of moonlight to see by.

We wound up sitting next to this little creek, a tributary to the main river. We sat and were just chatting while getting our weed out and whatnot. Importantly, we weren't high yet (not that weed, especially the schwag we still smoked in the early 90s, would make you see this).

I became absently aware of a scraping sound nearby. I realized it had been going on since we sat down, our chatting having covered the noise. I think I must have had a look of curiosity or alertness because my friend stopped talking, suddenly hearing the sound as well. We located it across the bank of the small creek from us. I could see motion in the underbrush by the moonlight but couldn't quite make out what was making the sound. A quick inventory of possibilities ran through my mind, but I couldn't think what animal, in our little piece of city-ified kinda woods, would make the noise, which sounded like scraping something hard against a rock.

Suddenly, the scraping sound stopped. Whatever it was had apparently become aware of us also. From the underbrush stood only what I can describe as a grizzled gnome-like character. I have no real memory of what he was wearing, if anything. But he was small, probably 2.5 to 3 feet tall, and looked quite weathered. Like you could put a cigarette out on his cheek and he'd no more notice it than would a boulder. In one hand he had what looked like a sharpened bone or antler and in the other some kind of stone for sharpening it.

He considered for just a moment, then seemed to just lose interest. He crouched back down in the underbrush, continuing to sharpen his tool. For our part, we very quietly (so as to not arouse his interest again) and very quickly gathered our things and got out of there. I realized later that I was afraid of him. First, because he really didn't look of this world. And secondly, because for being so small, he wasn't scared of us at all. In fact, he didn't look at us like he was looking at other sentient beings. He looked at us like we were an interesting pattern on a wall. Somehow, that was incredibly frightening. (Reddit)

Encounters with these nature elementals or spirits are generally not malevolent. The problem with these beings is that they have no ethics or morals, and no sense what death means for a human. As with all dimensionals, they do not have a fixed form, but take a form that is derived from the human subconscious. In other words, they appear in a form that we assume they have.

Gnomes appear as little folk with clothing dating from previous centuries. With some exceptions they were always benign until humans started to disrespect them. They mostly withdrew from contact, and don't like people anymore.

Mermaids are more tuned to the emotional level, hence the many stories of luring men to them. They can lure men into bodies of water, with a risk of drowning as they are always put into a trance state. This is not a malicious intent from the side of the mermaid, as she sees no difference between the physical and the etheric world.

Encounters with sylps and salamanders (air and fire) are very rare. They too are not malicious but due to their nature and intensity they can be very difficult to handle, and they are very sensitive to be treated with respect.

Natural Elementals can be very beneficial too, if they take an interest in a human, and that human is respectful towards them.

Artificial Elementals

About 2 years ago, I was at home watching a YouTube video about the disappearance of a young woman in Orlando FL, which is about 40 mins from where I live. The case has never been solved and the only evidence police had to go on was a surveillance video that showed a suspect wearing all white, almost like a painter's outfit. They had a white hat on too.

Later that day, I got a knock on my front door. When I looked through the peephole, I could see the person was wearing something that looked like a white painter's outfit with a white hat. I did NOT answer the door and was so freaked out that I spent a few days at my parents house after that.

Fast forward about 8 months later. My nephews were staying the weekend with me and were in the living room watching TV. I was in my bedroom getting ready and decided to watch that same video again. Shortly after it ended, I heard a knock at the carport door of my house. I told my nephews not to answer it and I would be out there, after I threw some clothes on. By the time I got to the door, the person had left. My nephews looked a little spooked, so I asked them what happened. They said that a man wearing white pants, a white shirt, and a white hat was knocking on the door and trying to look inside. They said it gave them a creepy feeling. HOLY GOD that made my blood run cold. I still to this day can't comprehend how this happened twice after watching that video. And I've never come up with an explanation that makes any sense whatsoever. So now I just avoid watching or listening to anything about that story. (Reddit)

I suspect that in the story above the man dressed in white was not a human, but a manifestation of the woman's own fears. In other words, she created, although unconsciously, an entity that reflected what she had watched on the video the same day.

There are many different kinds and groups of etheric beings on the lower astral planes. Some of them are artificial elementals. These elementals are generated by strong and/or persistent human emotions and/or thoughts. They live as long as the human emotion or thought is being generated and then cease to exist. Such an artificial elemental can be created unconsciously by a person who is obsessed with something. It is then possible that this elemental will appear to that person who does not know that in reality he created that being himself. Some elemental beings who appear in one's bedroom at night are created by the energy of that person.

Groups of people with strong emotions also create artificial elementals. They usually last as long as the emotions are sent out, for example, during a street protest.

Magicians can generate these artificial elementals out of thought forms. These beings are created on purpose to fulfill the desire of the magician, for good or for evil. They can be very specific depending on how the magician imagine them to be. They become independent energy beings endowed with a certain consciousness. They live as long as the magician provide the necessary energy for those beings to exist, but they can also derive their energy from natural sources, like energy spots, or from the victims they attach to. They can also be intentionally destroyed.

I once met a frater from a monastery order in Brussels who practiced white magic to help people. Most of clients were Moroccans (there is a large Moroccan immigrant group in Brussels) who were bothered by spirits send out by Moroccan magicians, mostly because of love disputes. In some cultures black magic is a thriving business.

A clairvoyant once told me that she was consulted by a woman who woke up every night at the exact same time, sweating and extremely panicked. This had been happening for years and she had no idea why. The clairvoyant found out that the cause was in an ivory elephant's tooth in the house. The woman explained that her (then deceased) husband had brought the tooth from Africa where he used to work for a company. The clairvoyant explained that there was an African shaman who, out of issues of jealousy, had put an artificial entity in the tooth, and then gave the tooth to her unsuspecting husband as a farewell gift. The husband died soon after, but the entity was still continue to torment his wife. She got rid of the tooth, and the night terrors disappeared.

Artificial entities can also be created accidentally and torment the person who created it and the people around him. Dion Fortune in her book Psychic Self Defense recounts her story of accidentally creating a werewolf when she was in a state of intense anger. The werewolf was created on the etheric energy dimension. Although it was still connected with her via an energy cord, the werewolf was able to disturb the dreams of a household member. Dion Fortune had to reabsorb the creature back into her before it would have a chance to disconnect from her and gain an independent existence. This story shows that especially psychic people have to watch their emotions or they can unintentionally create dimensional beings that can haunt them, or other people.

It should also be mentioned that these artificial elementals can also be created by more intelligent dimensionals, and then send off to appear into our physical world. Hence the sightings of werewolves, deer-men, bigfoot etc.

It is easy to notice that artificial elementals have very low intelligence. They have a behavior that is automatic, as they are programmed, consciously or unconsciously, for one specific task. They are repetitive, carrying out their instruction over and over again. An example of this are the black dogs that have been seen for over many centuries, even to the present day. Some black dogs are as tall as a man, some of them walk on their hind legs. They can have shiny red eyes, like other cryptic beings.

These were usually created by magicians or druids long time ago to guard certain sacred sites like stone circles against disrespectful people. They can appear physical enough to kill people. There are tales of black dogs appearing in churches. That is not surprising because churches were built on sacred sites of conquered pagan people.

I once read the story of a man who went to a stone circle to study its acoustic properties. He was all alone intensely studying one of the stones when he became aware of a rather large dog approaching him and coming up right next to him. He didn't want to look away from what he was studying, and casually mumbled some nice words to the dog, thinking that it was a dog from the nearby town. Then, from the corner of his eyes, he noticed that the dog seemed to grow bigger, but he dismissed it and continued the work he was doing. The dog then retreated, and when he looked to where the dog had gone he noticed that the dog has disappeared. When the man went back to the village to have a drink at the local tavern, he mentioned that he found it a little strange that a black dog had come up to him. The locals told him that the black dog was actually the guardian of the site, and two people had died at the stone circle in two separate instances. One of them was drunkard who relieved his bladder at the site.

The practice of creation of artificial elementals is actually very old. The following is a quote from a book by Paul Brunton (1898 - 1981) who was a British philosopher, mystic, traveler, and guru. He left a journalistic career to live among yogis, mystics, and holy men, and studied a wide variety of Eastern and Western esoteric teachings. At the end of his book A Search in Secret Egypt he included an interesting chapter about the creation of artificial elementals to guard the Egyptian tombs. This is what his Egyptian contact and guide told him:

Those who broke open the tombs of ancient Egypt have released forces upon the world that have endangered it. Both the tomb robbers of long ago and the archaeologists of our own days have all unwittingly opened the tombs of those who dealt in black magic. For in the final cycle of Egyptian history – the priesthood – and sorcery and the black arts were commonly practiced. When the white light of truth was formerly shining through the pure Egyptian religion became dimmed, and the noise-some shadows of false, materialistic doctrines crept in to replace it, the practice of mummification arose, together with all the elaborate accompanying rituals. Yet under the misleading and cunningly perverted teachings which supported this practice, there was an element of secret self-interest which sought to keep a long-preserved physical link with the physical world through the embalmment of the body.

This practice was originally intended only for the adept-kings of Egypt's prehistoric golden age, and for the spiritually advanced High priests who were truly channels of God, that their material bodies, impregnated with their holy power, might continue to exist and serve as focuses radiating that power into the world.

A kind of ancestor worship also developed, under which the bodies of the dead were embalmed, merely as a formal rite to show succeeding generations what their deceased ancestors looked like. It was really a hollow imitation of the mummification which was practiced in earlier epochs of Egypt to preserve holy relics of good kings and priests. For in the dark period which later descended on Egypt, when it was bereft of true spiritual light and when the hell-forces of the nether world were evoked by those with much knowledge but little compassion, the instructed men of the priestly and ruling classes caused their own bodies to be embalmed. This was sometimes done for the purpose of black magic, sometimes out of fear of the spirit's destruction in the purgatory that awaited it after death, and sometimes out of ignorant conformity to custom. In almost every case, before such a man passed out at death, he arranged for and had his tomb prepared whilst he was alive. After the preparation of the physical tomb he invoked (or had invoked for him by a priest of sufficient knowledge) a spirit-entity, and artificial elemental creation, imperceptible to bodily senses, sometimes good but more often bad, to protect and watch his mummy and act as a guardian spirit over his tomb.

Further to protect these embalmed bodies, the tombs were first hidden with cunning care and then it was generally taught to people that any profaner of these tombs would be visited by the spirit-powers with the most dreadful punishment. This teaching was believed, and those tombs were long left in peace. But with the increasing decay of the priesthood and rulers, even the people began to lose their superstitious faith, and tomb-robberies commenced, for the sake of plundering the jewels which were buried with almost every mummy of an important personage.

It was true that wherever the embalmed body was that of a person with some knowledge of magic, or under the protection and guidance of someone with such knowledge, spirit-powers had been invoked to protect those tombs and punish intruders. Those powers were often exceedingly evil, menacing and destructive. They existed within the closed tombs, and could continue to exist, for thousands of years. Hence your archaeologists who, in all ignorance, break open such spirit-shielded graves, do so at their own peril.

Yet it were merely a matter which affected the safety of archeologists and their families alone, what I have to tell you would be of little importance. But it is not. It is a matter that affects the safety of the whole world.

For among the tombs of high and low personages whom they excavate, there were those which were so protected. Every such tomb which has been unsealed lets out, like a flood, a rush of pent-up noxious evil spirit-entities upon our physical world. Each mummy that is taken out of such a tomb and transported to your European and American museums, carries with it the etheric link with those entities, and hence their awful influence. Those influences can bring only harm to the world, harm of various kinds, even to the point of destructively affecting the destinies of nations. You Westerners have no shield against them, and because they are invisible to you, they are nonetheless potent.

When your world has come to realize that evil spirits are imprisoned in a number of those tombs, it may be too late; for by then all the tombs will have been opened, and those devilish creatures will have made their escape. Among other things they are and will be responsible for international treacheries. Ignorance of Nature's laws does not excuse a man from suffering whenever he transgresses against those laws; and ignorance of the existence of evil, magical forces does not excuse your century from suffering the punishment which your unnecessary intrusions into their realms will bring upon it.

These artificially created elemental spirits have been released in sufficient numbers during the present century to terrorize the world from their psychic realm, which is immaterial enough to be invisible but close enough to influence the physical existence of the living. We who hold the spiritual welfare of mankind at heart, battle against these dark forces on their own levels, yet we are not permitted by Nature's laws to destroy them any more than we are permitted to destroy living men whom we know to be potent dangers to their fellow beings. Our powers are restricted to shielding persons and institutions under our especial protections.

Those objects which are taken out of the tombs along with the mummies – such as scarabs, jewels, amulets, and furniture – carry with them the influence of those tombs. If the latter were not magical, it linked up with evil entities, then no harm could result from their appropriation and rifling, but if they were so linked, then their unsealing may bring misfortune and disaster. But the ordinary archeologists and Egyptologists, unaware of such facts and unable to detect the difference between the two delve into both alike. Whether it heeds it or not, let the world receive this message: let it not meddle with tombs whose psychic nature men do not understand. Let the world stop opening those graves until it has acquired sufficient knowledge to comprehend the serious results of what it is doing.

Most of the kings had some degree of occult powers, whether for good or for evil purposes, for they were initiated in them by their High Priests.

Higher Spiritual Elementals

Beings from the higher dimensional realm rarely manifest themselves on the physical plane. They usually only do so for a specific purpose. These higher beings are careful in how they appear and their effect on the witness. This is not always the case when lower dimensional entities enter our world.

4.3. Age-Old Phenomenon

The existence of elementals, natural and artificial, have been known and talked about for for a very long time. It is nothing new, and today there are still people who can see or contact them, and magicians who are engaged in work with elemental beings.

I am not going into a comparison of descriptions of appearances of UFOs and dimensional beings from past centuries or from other cultures or indigenous people, with the modern day accounts. They are strikingly similar if not the same, but others have writing about this subject. Evans Wentz (1878-1965), an American anthropologist and writer, gathered a lot of interesting information about fairies in general, by interviewing local people in his book The Fairy-Faith in Celtic Countries; worth while reading.

There are certain elemental beings that have been purposely intruding into our world for ages, such as those associated with what we now call the UFO phenomenon. Although many believe that UFOs are extraterrestrial craft, all the evidence show that they are actually dimensional beings, mostly if not all from this planet. These entities have always delighted in frightening, confusing, and misleading the human race. The so-called 'aliens' are doing exactly the same. What fairies and demons did in the past, 'extraterrestrials' are doing in the present. Flying saucers and light spheres have travelled our skies for many centuries. The dimensional beings have always been here and have always entered our physical world to meddle with the affairs of humans.

Although some of them are benign, there are those with a higher intelligence that are behind the UFO phenomenon that purposeful interfere with our lives in a negative way.

In the past women were visited by, and had sexual encounters with elves at night. Now 'aliens' have amorous affairs with contactees, and sexual encounters with aliens and hybrids are frequently reported in the UFO phenomenon.

Dragons and devils are now called reptilians and mothmen. Sightings of 'wild men' were common all over the world, now we call them sasquatch or bigfoot.

The problem with all these sightings is that we believe what we see. Instead we should be looking at the true nature of this phenomenon and its true purpose.

The UFO phenomenon is not a simple appearance of extraterrestrials in their cosmic ships. It has many manifestations that lie well beyond this simple hypothesis. It deals with many strange creatures, sudden appearances and disappearances, ghostly apparitions, poltergeist manifestations, even prophecies and hallucinations. Reality seems warped, strange, manipulated; time unaccounted for, memories missing. All this is nothing new either.

The entities behind all this are actually from our immediate environment, a dimension away. They have always misled us, played with us, and misinformed us. They like to show themselves and hide at the same time.

Throughout the centuries, mystery vehicles and 'people' or entities Have been showing up and disappearing mysteriously. They are often strange in appearance and/or behavior. They come in all varieties and the the so-called Men-in-Black is just a recent term for a small section related to UFO sightings. They bother not only witnesses but UFO researchers as well, some of them giving up their research entirely because of it.

There are also encounters with mystery people that are very positive, and often have spiritual significance for the person. However these encounters are rare.

4.4. Points of Entry

Nature spirits are most commonly encountered through their element. Gnomes in hills and mountains, mermaids in or near bodies of water, sylphs through the air, and salamanders in fire and volcanoes. Other elementals are more free to roam, or can wander around in a certain area.

When we turn our attention to UFOs, then the gathered data shows us some interesting features in regard to where they appear into our physical world, or where they like to hang around. They like to visit nuclear sites, military installations, but also less likely places such as gravel pits, garbage dumps, and cemeteries. These sites are also visited by cryptic beings, the strange creatures and monsters who like to scare people. Actually the latter are often seen when UFOs are sighted. They are linked together. The countryside is not the only place that is plagued by them, they also appear in the middle of well-populated cities.

The places where they are seen are not random either. They are largely confined to specific areas of this planet, where they appear and reappear, century after century. These are precise geographical locations, and anyone digging into the history and lore of such locations will find thousands of accounts of strange sightings. Nowadays these locations are called vortexes or windows to other dimensions. The veil between dimensions is 'thinner' and entrance and exit is easier for those who know how to use them.

Terrestrial Energy Spots

It is well known among dowsers that a crossing of earth energy lines can cause a strong built up of energies that allow spirits to manifest in our reality. When a house is built on such a crossing, it is usually haunted.

UFO window areas tend to be where where peculiar magnetic faults exist, which give off dowsable energies. Our planet is covered with magnetic faults. They often cross under the ancient sacred sites, and spots where flying saucers are seen most frequently. Psychically oriented people living in these regions tend to have extraordinary experiences with elementals, angels, MIB, and spacemen. These sites are not only easy for the dimensional beings to enter in our physical world, but a psychic or sensitive person can peer into the other dimensions at such sites, or have experiences that are 'out of this world'. The interaction of magnetic faults can cause magnetic anomalies. Paranormal events often occur at such sites of magnetic anomalies. But why is there not a constant activity of paranormal events, or sightings of UFOs and cryptic beings? They occur in bursts or cycles, with many years or even decades of non-activity. It seems that another factor is involved, probably some periodical external, cosmic radiation that activates these areas making dimensional manifestations much easier than normal. Then we have a lot of poltergeist phenomena, a UFO flap, a cluster of monster sightings and other mysterious happenings.

Electromagnetic energy plays a key role in these manifestations, but how this exactly works, we don't know.

4.5. Non-Physical Nature

This happened 10 years ago but the details of that morning are still fresh in my head. A couple friends and I were traveling back to their house. We were driving down Rt. 14 in Marshfield, MA. Was about 5 AM EST on a Sunday. Roads were basically empty. Were driving on this long stretch of straight road when all of a sudden, a large orb appeared into existence before our eyes. I'm not exactly sure how big it was, but large nonetheless. The orb was transparent, but the reality around it seemed warped and obscured. The trees on either side of the highway were being bent and pulled by said orb, almost like if being pulled by a gravitational force. The orb then shifted left, back to its original position, then to the right, and back to its original position. At this point were all freaking out in the car because we're also traveling toward said orb. My friend slams on his brakes and swerves to the side of the road. Before he even had a chance to put the car in park so we could get a better view, it was gone and the trees are no longer being pulled towards the center of the road. This whole phenomena was only about 15-20 seconds long. (Reddit)

UFOs come from another dimension; and that is why they behave so different than what we would expect from a normal physical craft. When vehicles or beings from that other dimension make their entrance into ours, a distortion of our reality is commonplace, in many different ways. The transparency, in the example above, also is an indication of an other-dimensional nature. This is just a small example. There is plenty of evidence that beings from other dimensions enter our world on a regular basis.

Dimensional beings are from a 'world' where 'matter' is different. From our point of view it is primarily energy. This is the easiest way to envision their living environment and the nature of their being. They can arrange this energy to assume any form they want. I suspect that some of them have taken a habitual form they prefer when they appear in our world, but they can change this at any time. This is well-known in esoteric circles but it might come as a surprise to many people when we talk about UFOs and aliens.

Since the 1950s there have been hundreds of thousands of UFO sightings. One of the main characteristics of UFOs is their sudden appearance and disappearance into thin air, even in the presence of multiple witnesses. One moment they are visible, the next they are invisible. But sometimes when they are invisible to the eyes, they are still visible to radar. It is just one clue that we are dealing with electromagnetic frequencies of a wide range.

UFOs are in essence not physical spacecraft, but a structure of intense energies that can shift up and down the electromagnetic frequencies, from above gamma rays down to the visible spectrum and even further down into the infrared, and probably even lower. When we see them with our eyes, then this is only part of their presence in our environment. Because the dimensionals are non-physical, their energy can shift according to their needs. When we perceive them, they can change color and shape, they can emit sound or not, and can emit other energy phenomena often observed with these sightings.

Physical spaceships are just a form they want to show us, and these sightings are a minority. Most of the sightings are of light spheres with various energy manifestations. That is why a UFO light sphere can split up in different parts or different UFOs can come together and form one light sphere. They are not physical but move through various electromagnetic manifestations.

There are sightings in which the flying saucer or other physical-looking vehicle is actually partially or entirely transparent, and the witnesses can see what is inside, including the occupants. This is because the ufonauts want the witness to see what is inside the (energy) vehicle to support the belief system that these vehicles are occupied by aliens and the like.

The non-physical nature of ufonauts, or aliens, also shows when they enter or exit their craft. They can suddenly appear outside the craft, or just walk through the walls of the craft, just like ghosts. Not to mention all those grey aliens, and other weird creatures, who just walk into our bedrooms at night.

Another argument against physical extraterrestrial craft is that since 1896, with the beginning of the airships and continuing with the flying saucers, there have been hundreds of reports in which lone witnesses have stumbled onto grounded hard objects being repaired by their pilots. You just don't travel across the galaxy with ships that are so flimsy that they are always need to be repaired. It is a magician's show.

Also, while in flight, they have an astounding habit of losing pieces of metal, and sometimes exploding in midair. Making landing marks and dropping pieces of metal are meant to foster the belief that the objects are physical and mechanical, but they are not. Their appearance is always about deception and hiding who they really are.

4.6. Psychic Abilities

The ufonauts or 'aliens' have always demonstrated that they have total knowledge of the contacted individuals and that they can even foretell their future. They also know everything about their family members or friends. Why would a supposedly extraterrestrial be concerned with foretelling the future or gaining detailed information about other people? Ufonauts, or so-called 'aliens' know everything they need to know about a person past, his personality, his likely future, and the people around him. The only way to know all this is by way of what we call psychic talents. It is way to peer into the energy level of existence. Humans do have that innate ability but is mostly turned off or at a low level. Only those whose psychic senses are fully developed can look up information not otherwise possible.

it is different for the dimensional beings who exist at the energy level. It depends on their level of development, but for those who are more evolved, they have ready access to all the information about a person's life. In other words, our lives are an open book to them. They seem to know everything about us, not only about individual lives, but also humanity in all its complexities.

Does it surprise you that an 'alien' speaks in the native language of the contacted person? These dimensional beings do not have to learn a language. They can just tune into it by mentally consulting the person's mind.

The fact that the dimensionals can look into our minds without any effort is really important to know. How far this can go shows from a statement John Keel made in one of his books:

Like everyone else, I was caught up in the games, mystery piling upon mystery. Someone somewhere obviously knew every move I was making, or so it seemed. I became very secretive, not even telling my closest friends where I was going or where I had been. Nevertheless, something seemed to be following me. I would drop in unannounced on a remote farm and soon after I settled down to chat with the residents their phone would ring and there would be no one on the line, or a series of loud beeps would ring out. The farmer would act astonished. „We've never had a call like that before!“ The phone would ring repeatedly until I left. This happened several different times in several different places.

The games these entities were playing with Keel went even so far that he even had to think about something, and soon the entities would make the exact same thing happening to an unsuspecting person who would then contact Keel because he was a UFO researcher. They intended to supply Keel with UFO cases that would confirm what he was thinking about.

4.7. Character Profile of Interfering Dimensionals

Nature Spirits

Beings that live in the other dimensions on this planet are diverse in nature and intention. Most interactions with nature spirits, human souls and ghost are pretty harmless and at most prankish.

I have already mentioned that nature spirits or natural elementals are not malevolent, but they don't have the same ethics or morals as we do. They see reality in a different light.

Low Consciousness Dimensional Beings

There is a whole range of consciousness and intelligence with dimensional beings, from very low to high. There are some negative individual beings on the lower astral planes who can manifest in our physical world and scare us or cause havoc. Some are just roaming around. Ghosts are just energy residues that are visible from time to time.

Artificial elementals have a very low consciousness and their intelligence is limited to the program instilled in them. For example, guardian spirits that were created to protect certain sacred places.

Some beings associated with the UFO phenomenon can also be considered artificial elementals programmed with specific instructions. They are more sophisticated as they can appear fully physical and interact with humans in an (almost) normal way.

John Keel had contact with a woman who had met a Man-in-Black, called Apol, who fed her information and predictions. Keel submitted questions to the woman for Apol to answer. By this Keel was able to come up with a profile for the mysterious Apol, and it wasn't that flattering:

By this time Mr. Apol had assumed a definite personality. He was as real to me as Cold was to Derenberger, although I would never meet him. I studied his psychology, his quick temper, his mischievous sense of humor. I argued with him on the phone, sometimes for two or three hours at a stretch. And I felt sorry for him. It became apparent that he really did not know who or what he was. He was a prisoner of our time frame. He often confused the past with the future. I gathered that he and all his fellow entities found themselves transported backward and forward in time involuntarily, playing out their little games because they were programmed to do so, living—or existing—only so long as they could feed off the energy and minds of mediums and contactees. I could ask him any kind of obscure question and receive an instant and accurate answer, perhaps because my own mind was being tapped just like my telephone. (The Mothman Prophecies, by John Keel)

By themselves an encounter with these low consciousness entities have little meaning. Usually their purpose is to intimidate or cause fear. They are part of a larger scheme involving more intelligent beings.

The 'Aliens'

However there is a class of dimensional beings responsible for the broad spectrum of intrusions and meddling in our lives. Their activities are broadly grouped under the term UFO phenomena. They are 'alien' in the sense that they are non-human, but not necessarily extraterrestrial.

Who those 'aliens' are, can only be speculated at. They have great advantages over us, humans:

They are very good at hiding their identity.

They are very intelligent.

They can see us whenever they want, but we cannot see them, unless they want us to see them.

They know what we are thinking and feeling. They know our concepts, ideas, expectations, and everything that makes us human.

They can enter our physical world, but we cannot enter their dimensional world.

Most people don't know where they are from. Are they from a specific dimension here on Earth, or do they come from somewhere else in the universe, and do they have some business to attend to on this planet? How many different groups are there? What is their intention?

It is quite possible that they have been here all along, and we humans are the newcomers (humanity is only a couple of millions of years old), and thus they consider us the 'aliens'. Maybe they don't want us on their planet.

They are in control of everything. They can control and manipulate animals, people, events, energy and space/time.

They show us clearly that they can frighten us, harm, mutilate and kill with impunity.

It also seems that at least some of them feed on the energies we generate, from worshiping to fear.

Above all, they only show us what we are allowed to see and experience. This is often intended to derail us, to misinform us, to misdirect us.

Overall, their intrusion in our world seems very negative and harmful, and in many cases it is. But when you look at it from a wider angle, it seems that their actions are primarily intended to chase people away from certain areas that they need for their own purposes. An overt aggressive action would only backfire, so they resort to intimidation and fear tactics. Part of this are the occasional killings or mutilations of livestock and pets. And ultimately they invade our homes to create havoc through poltergeist phenomena and showing up in our bedrooms.

We, humans usually don't get the message until we have have gone already through many of these ordeals. So, in certain cases the people have a long list of this kind of harassment.

Considering that there are also other kinds of intrusions in people's lives, it is safe to say that they have their own motives to keep meddling with our minds.

At the other side, humans, in general, are not that nice either. We have a bad reputation of being aggressive and destructive. I don't need to give you a long list of all the bad things humans do. If we would shape up and gain more understanding about the nature of reality and the existence of other intelligent beings 'out there' and 'out here', and if we would get a better emotional education, then the dimensional beings might not have to resort to all the various scare tactics and mind manipulation techniques. Then, they might approach us in a more positive way, and a more fruitful mutual respective agreement might be reached that would allow both humans and dimensional beings live in harmony.

4.8. Why So many Negative Encounters?

If there is one main issue running in the UFO phenomenon, then it is the largely negative impact in the close encounters, contacts and involvement. There are radiation effects from burns to deaths, psychological issues from ridicule to paranoia, implantation of false mental experiences and memories, interferences in one's personal life, intimidation and threats from the entities such the MIB, harassment through poltergeist manifestations, etc.

Where else do you find this kind of negativity? In magic practices, in spiritualistic séances and anything else that deals with other-world entities. In those practices one can summon and make contact with spirits. But man himself is still very much involved with his animal instincts and lower emotional issues, hence the practitioners are often dealing with lower entities. Man finds himself on the physical plane which is the lowest of the cosmic dimensions. His consciousness and awareness is therefore very limited. Practitioners who want to deal with spiritual entities must have an adequate training and must develop their psychology in order to remain unaffected by any negative influences in their work.

But an ordinary person is like a sitting duck for the other-worldly negative entities. Sitting in a meadow asking to be beamed up, or participating in making-contact groups or channelings, is asking for trouble. Trouble have been following some of those people; it all depends on your own level of spirituality and how much you are willing to open yourself to something you don't have a clue off. If you think that ascended master Ashtar from Sirius is going to take you for ride, he will, but not one you have in mind.

There are some interesting correspondences between occult practices that deal with entities and the experiences in the UFO phenomenon:

Opening your mind to contact spirits is opening yourself for a lot of trouble, as lower entities are all too willing to come through. The same with UFOs and aliens. Being positive, mystical or spiritual is not enough to know what you are dealing with.

Going to a medium or channeler can attract negative entities to your life. The same is true when you go or adhere to an alien contactee, abductee or 'experiencer'.

If you are a 'sensitive' by nature, you first have to learn to protect and shield yourself.

Sulfurous or other strong bad smelling odors occur in séances, haunted places, with monsters and with UFO sightings.

Séances usually require darkness or dim light, as strong light can disrupt the manifestations. UFOs also shun bright light from flash lights and lasers, sometimes retaliating.

Temperature drops are well known in séances, in haunted places, spirit manifestations, and also in UFO close encounters.

Telepathy and hearing voices are known both in spirit contacts as well as with 'aliens' and UFO sightings.

Apparitions of beings in séance rooms are not visible, and of a densified energy nature, but not solid or biological. The same is true with UFO vehicles, aliens and cryptic entities.

Materialization and dematerialization is common with séances, poltergeist and alien contacts, especially with abductees and contactees.

Appearance of light spheres are common in all these fields. Also explosions, implosions, sounds of taps, raps, bangs etc.

None of them are subjective to the laws of physics of our material world. All these beings and vehicles are not subject to inertia, gravitation and size. They can expand and contract.

All kinds of strange sounds are heard with all these phenomena, as well as strange effects on the physical body.

The different kinds of poltergeist manifestations not only happen with the presence of spirits but also with the presence of aliens, or after a UFO sighting.

In other words, they are all of the same kind.

4.9. Robert Kirk and the Sidhe

As to the identity of the ufonauts or dimensionals being the same as the old time Fairies, the most in-depth description about Fairies, or the Sidhe, comes from the 17th century Robert Kirk.

Rev. Robert Kirk wrote a manuscript called The Secret Commonwealth that dates from 1691, but the earliest published form dates from 1815. Robert Kirk was a seventh son. A seventh son was regarded as a special birth, providing the child with mystical or psychic gifts. Kirk was a minister of Aberfoyle (a village in the county of Perthshire, Scotland.) Kirk's text is based on the then existing knowledge about the Fairies in Scotland. In spite of the Church's opposition, Kirk was very interested in the local folklore, people's experiences, and the wisdom gained by the psychic gifted people of his time. As such it reflects what people of that time knew about the Fairies, mixed with some general beliefs that might not really accurate. But the information provided is very interesting because it reflects many of the characteristics we now attribute to UFOs and their occupants. As such they are the same kind of beings. Kirk's terminology and knowledge reflects the Irish understanding of these beings.

Fairies were known under many different names depending on the region or country. In Kirk's manuscript they were also called Siths, Sleagh Maith, or the Good People. They are also known under the name Sidhe. They were called the Good People to prevent their wrath, because the Fairies did not like to hear anything bad said about them, and they could retaliate.

Other cultures or peoples have their own names for these beings, and their folklore is virtually the same. What Kirk understood by Fairies are not the now childish concepts of little flower fairies. They are human-looking other-dimensional beings of an intelligence similar to humans.

Here we will go over the statements made in Kirk's text, and give a comparison with modern day experiences of UFOs and strange entities. I will use the word ufonauts for what people are seeing as supposedly aliens, extraterrestrials and other entities associated with the UFO phenomenon.

Fairies are of a mixed nature, between man and angels. Their bodies are of a fluidious spirit, meaning that they can change their body form at will.

Ufonauts have demonstrated that they are not solid. They can walk through walls and enter their vehicles without the use of a door. Some float, are transparent, and a change in appearance is also not unknown.

They can appear and disappear at will.

Ufonauts also disappear out of thin air, and suddenly disappear on the spot.

The fairies move to new areas of living each quarter of the year because they can't stay in one place for long. They are then seen to "swim in the Air near the Earth with Bag and Bagadge".

I take that Kirk means that they travel in the air in their vehicles. There are plenty of previous century accounts of light orbs travelling over the lands and in the air. The idea that they move four times a year is a unique idea, maybe it is just a belief that Kirk picked up during his investigations, without any solid foundation.

They live in tribes and orders. Their way of living reflects ours, but Kirk adds that they might do this only in appearance to mock us.

UFO and entity appearances often occur at certain 'hot spots' or 'windows'. It could be that these locations coincides with the living quarters of different groups in the other dimension.

In Kirk's time death was quite common as a lot of people didn't even make it middle age. Funerals were also common. So it is not surprising that Kirk mentions that seers, or psychics, would see the fairies show up at funerals, or even before the death of a person, as to announce his impending death.

The psychics at his time also knew that the fairies can appear in the appearance of an existing man, forming a 'Doubleman'. This duplicate would show himself to family and neighbors, and he would look exactly the same, in every detail, to the original human. Such a 'Co-walker' can appear before or after the death of the original man. People would see such a Co-walker enter a house, and then they knew that the original man would visit them in a few days. It is was not known why such a 'Doubleman' would hang around the original man for a certain length of time.

UFO researcher John Keel made it clear, based on his investigations, that some Men-in-Black would appear as an exact double of a government official, even using the name of the official or agent. Some abductees have seen a deceased family member inside the flying saucer, to then change into an alien.

They fairies only make themselves known to man when it is required. Otherwise they will not make any contact.

This is certainly the case with the ufonauts. It is they who contact humans, and orchestrate any contact on their terms.

The fairies live in large and beautiful houses lit with perpetual lamps and fires that don't need any fuel.

Some contactees were taking for a space ride and visited beautiful cities and their inhabitants on other planets, such as (supposedly) the Moon and Venus, and other planets.

Kirk tells us about stories of a woman who claimed to have been taken away by the fairies to nurse a fairy-child. They never could see a way to escape or what the Fairies were doing in other rooms. When the child has been weaned, the woman dies, is brought back or is offered a choice to stay. But if she tried to gain some of the fairies powers, she is severely punished. Usually with pain, blinded in one or both eyes, or struck dumb.

Fairies were known to abduct people, especially children. We see the same with 'aliens', Greys or otherwise. Although these stories were probably more folklore than based on experience, the fact that people were hit with pain and blinded reminds us of the numerous cases in which people came down with conjunctivitis after a UFO or entity sighting, as a result of intense infrared radiation.

It was generally believed that plain iron was an effective repellent to keep the fairies away. Apparently the fairies are 'terrified' by iron.

I am not aware of any alien experiences in which there is mention of iron as a means of protection. The belief that iron protects against not only fairies but also other kinds of entities is wide spread. The only reason I can see why this would be the case is that iron easily interacts with magnetic fields, and a lot of UFO and entity encounters show that strong magnetic fields are sometimes generated.

The fairies dress and speak according to the people and country they live in. They do not speak much, but they whistle in a clear manner.

We see the same with aliens and extraterrestrials. They speak the same language as the person they contact. I think that this is basically due to the fact that most communications are telepathic. Other aliens have been heard speaking with high pitched sounds. The whistling sounds are probably due to some energetic effects when they appear in our dimension, and are not a language. After all, the dimensional beings all communicate through telepathy.

Kirk leaves the question open as to how they procure their garments: is it by manufacturing them through physical instruments or are they just imitating what humans wear?

Even during his time, people already questioned the appearance of the Fairies because it so mimics the human culture, and they knew the fairies could appear in any form they want. We see the same with ufonauts. They appear as beautiful blond beings in white garments, or as aliens in glistening metallic suits, or hairy dwarves, depending on the belief system of the person contacted.

The Fairy men are said to travel around a lot, sometimes to the peril of humans.

The men have gatherings, and fight and have burials, both in the air and on the ground.

The Fairies were known to cause a lot mischief at the expense of humans, but also among themselves. Ufonauts certainly are also not that kind to humans, as is evidenced in the abductions and many harmful effects in witnesses afterwards.

The Fairies live much longer than humans, but eventually they must die too because everything moves in circles.

Aliens are also said to live much longer, according to abductees.

"They are said to have aristocratical Rulers and Laws, but no discernible Religion, Love, or Devotion towards God."

Ufonauts never show any sign of religion or belief in God, and certainly do not act out of love towards humans.

Magicians and witches can summon them by the use of spells. The Fairies then like to cause the harm intended to humans. The magicians and witches do not like when the Fairies show up unannounced with un-sightly looks and actions intended to torture them. Not all of them will do harm. They usually stay silent and unmoved.

UFOs and ufonauts can also be conjured by groups of people who hold gatherings and mediations. Steven Greer's mediation group events are an example of this. 'Aliens' show up unannounced in our houses. Cryptic creatures often just stand there and look at the person.

Because of their non-physical nature they cannot be harmed by us, don't feel pain or get sick.

Ufonauts, bigfoot and other entities have been shot at and 'killed' only to disappear into thin air, or they just walk away without leaving any trace of blood.

They have a sort of arrow that they throw like a dart, having "something of the Nature of Thunderbolt", and this can wound vital parts without breaking the skin. They do attack and stab not only animals but also humans with this weapon. They kill cows and other animals for the purpose of sucking out the life force on which they live.

People of past centuries did not know the existence of microwaves. The description Kirk gives might relate to the classic light beam coming from UFOs, but also from a kind of wand carried by ufonauts that can stun, paralyze and cause physical injuries and ailments with or without any skin burns. A 'thunderbolt' is a description of very intense energy in the form of a light beam, so this is most likely an intense microwave beam. Many injuries from exposure to UFOs, light orbs and even entities are the result of intense microwave radiation.

The killing of cows and other animals are still ongoing and attributed to the 'aliens', as UFOs are often seen nearby. Microwaves can easily be used to kill.

Interestingly, Kirk believed they did this to feed on the life energy of the animals. We find the same belief in the UFO community.

The fairies do not have strong tendencies to bad habits as we humans do because they don't have physical bodies. But the Fairies are not perfect and have doubts, disputes and quarrels among each other. They also commit (generally speaking) bad things, such as kidnapping of human children to their domain, and the children never return. They are also subject to envy, spite, hypocrisy, lying, and dissimulation. However some Fairies have a great measure of virtue and strive for a better quality of life.

Abductees often tell us that they were taken away as children by the ufonauts or 'aliens'. One wonders if some of the children who go missing are really taken and not returned by those beings, aside from cases of human kidnapping.

Kirk tells of a seer who lost his speech and the power of his legs because of his frequent encounters with the fairies.

In the book UFO Danger Zone by Bob Pratt, who investigated numerous UFO accounts in Brazil, the author describes the harmful effects of UFO radiation/light and their light beams on the victims. In some cases people lost their bodily strength, and could not walk properly and some could not speak at all for hours after the encounter.

4.10. The Sidhe's Artificial Realm

I have written an article called Unmasking The Sidhe centered around the information given by Jaap van Etten, who was contacted by two Sidhe beings. It gives an interesting perspective about the race of beings that came to Earth and created the human body. A conflict of opinions arose and one group split itself apart, and decided to create an artificial realm in a dimension just 'above' the physical world. A realm of higher vibrational energy where they could create their own 'heaven' so to speak. But they required a lot of energy for that, and they withdrew this energy from the physical world. In order to maintain their lives in this realm, they need to a constant supply of this energy. This caused the physical humans to sink deeper in the material world, with all the destructive consequences thereof. In the mean while, the Sidhe were able to live in their self-created paradise. However it was an unnatural and unbalanced choice, and there is now disagreement among themselves as to how to proceed. It is a very interesting concept, and might well be the explanation of both the identity of the dimensional beings, as well as their actions towards humans. Click on the link above if you want to read more about this.

4.11. Dion Fortune about the Fairy Kingdom

Dion Fortune (1890-1946) was a British occultist, cabalist, ceremonial magician, novelist and author. In her book Psychic Self-Defense she writes about the nature of the Fairy folk. It gives you another view of who these dimensional beings are.

There are other forms of life as well as ours whose sphere of evolution impinges upon the earth. In the realm of folk-lore we constantly meet with the idea of intercourse between the human and the fairy kingdoms; of the marriage of a human being with a fairy spouse, or the theft of a child by the fairies, an impish changeling being left in its place. We shall be rash if we assume that an extensive body of folk-belief is entirely without foundation in fact. Let us therefore examine these old and crude beliefs and see whether we can find any grounds for them, and if so, what the real nature of the facts may be, and whether they throw any light upon modern psychic phenomena of the kind we are considering in these pages. There are many of us who have met people who might well be described as non-human, soulless, in that the ordinary human motives are not operative with them, nor do the ordinary human feelings prompt or inhibit them. We cannot but love them, for they have great charm, but we cannot but dread them as well, for they spread an infinitude of suffering around them. Although seldom deliberately evil, they are singularly detrimental to all with whom they come in contact. They, for their part, are unhappy and lonely in our midst. They feel themselves to be alien and unaccompanied; every man's hand is against them, and in consequence it all too often happens that their hand is against everyone and they develop a puckish malevolence, though there is seldom calculated evil-doing. Gratitude, compassion, good faith, morality and common honesty are utterly foreign to their natures, as far beyond their conception as the differential calculus. They are not immoral, however, but simply non-moral. On the other hand, they possess the virtues of absolute sincerity and great courage. In terms of human ethics they are "undesirables," but they have an ethic of their own to which they are loyal, and that is the beauty which is truth, and this is all they know, and, as far as their life is concerned, all they need to know. In appearance they are usually small and slight, possessing unusual physical strength and endurance but very liable to nervous exhaustion and brain-storms. In social relations they take violent likes and dislikes; they show a facile and demonstrative affection towards those they like, but quickly forget them. Gratitude and pity are unknown to their nature. Towards those they dislike they are pettily malicious, and in all relations of life they are utterly irresponsible. One cannot describe them better than to say that they resemble nothing so much as a blend of Persian kitten and pet monkey. They have the beauty and aloofness and charm of the cat, and the amusing, mischievous destructiveness of the monkey. Many human beings hate them at sight; others are fascinated by them because they bring with them a sense of unearthly beauty and a quickening of the life-forces.

5.12. Intimidation and Fear

5.13. Nefarious Attacks

If the occupants of UFOs or flying saucers would be extraterrestrials who are able to traverse the universe in their technological sophisticated spacecraft, we would expect them to be at least more intelligent than humans. However, the UFO phenomenon teaches us otherwise. The occupants of those vehicles behave in strange and varied ways. Their actions sometimes seem childlike and pointless. They never engage in an intelligent conversations. On the contrary, they are mostly silent, and when they communicate they keep it very simple, and sometimes the conversation is just meaningless. For a supposedly extraterrestrial race it is also strange to pass on prophecies and predictions of the future. Both their appearances and their communications are rather meant to keep us busy with something mundane while they are engaged in something we are not supposed to see or know. Or maybe they are just pulling our sleeves.

5.1. Orchestrated Events

Sightings and contacts can be accidental. However the majority of the cases show that these are actually carefully orchestrated. They seem accidental but they are not.

When a witness stumbles upon a landed craft that is being repaired by aliens, one can assume that it is what it seems to be. But when over the many years there are several reports coming in of ufonauts repairing their craft, then it becomes obvious that this is a standard mode of operation, following a well-established script. A person was chosen to be at a specific location to witness that particular theater play, just to make him believe in ETs repairing a physical craft. It is also intended to make UFO researchers and the entire UFO community believe in the same thing by repeating this idea of ufonauts being physical extraterrestrials.

Not only an individual is manipulated this way, but a large groups of people too, and eventually a large part of our society. Keep on showing the same thing over and over again and people will believe it is true.

5.2. Imitating of What is in our Minds

Have you ever wondered why there are so many different descriptions of the UFO occupants? Lists have been made based on the witnesses' descriptions in an effort to categorize them in alien races, but the kinds of ufonauts have run into hundreds and hundreds. From dwarfs to giants, from blond Venusians to hairy monsters, from greys to reptilians...

Not only the appearance of the ufonauts but the entire contact scenario is highly reflective to what that person believes in. The dimensional beings are able to look in a person's mind to find what he most likely imagine an alien to be, and so they appear. This is nothing new. Elementals have been doing this for ages. Dimensional beings adapt their forms according to the changing belief systems. In the past they appeared as elves and devils, now they appear as extraterrestrials.

This is one of the reasons why it is not important how they look like or how they appear. This is just a reflection of our own mind and belief system. With contactees the information given is equally based on their own belief, and then they starts to develop this even further as far as the contactee can accept it.

In essence these dimensionals are imitators and will transform their energies to form and even matter that reflect our own concepts. Because these forms are the result of their will power and mind, they are only temporary manifestations in our physical world. Eventually these apparitions have to revert back to their energy form in their own dimension.

A nice example of how clever and effective the dimensional beings can look into our minds and bring it into existence for their purposes and our viewing is described by John Keel in The Mothman Prophecies:

However, I cannot accuse the CIA as being the source of the weird incidents outlined here. Rather, the phenomenon is imitative. This paranormal mimicry is difficult for many to understand but I come across constant examples. Early in January 1973, for instance, a reliable witness in Ohio observed an unusual-looking helicopter which she was able to describe in detail. When she sketched it for a local UFO enthusiast he was flabbergasted. He was an aeronautical engineer specializing in helicopters and he knew the thing she drew was a new secret helicopter that was still on the drawing board!

Even closer to home, a few days after Tad Jones's sighting on Route 64, True magazine hit the stands with an article of mine about flying saucers. It was illustrated with drawings of all kinds of odd shaped objects, many of them the pure products of the artist's imagination. It included an exact replica of Jones's sphere, complete with wheeled legs and propeller. An object exactly like this had never been described in the UFO literature before ... or since. The artist had produced his layout many weeks before. Somehow the phenomenon had mischievously duplicated the artist's conception for Jones's benefit.

The late 1800's airships also appeared when the first zeppelin ideas were only on the drawing boards.

5.3. Change

It's all about change. When the dimensionals enter our world, they are initially manifestations of energy. That is why there are so many cases of light spheres. These light spheres can then change into other forms, like a metallic-looking spaceship. This also applies to beings. There have been reports of people who literally saw an entity coming out of a light sphere, or just a bright light. The entity looks completely solid and physical but it is in reality just a visual form that took shape out of the light energy. This light energy can turn into angels, fairies, hooded beings, greys, ugly monsters, even into black automobiles and flying machines. It is just transformation of one form into another. There are several reports of abductees who saw a friend or family member inside a spaceship, who changed later on into a Grey.

5.4. Inducing Trance

The dimensionals, especially in UFO cases, can adjust the frequency of their energy throughout the EM spectrum. When they appear to us in visible light, the light is not only meant to be seen, but it is also used to induce trance states in humans of their choice.

Trance is a feature that is reported again and again in UFO close encounters, and even in encounters with entities. When a light appears in the darkness, a person naturally is fixated on this light, and a light hypnotic trance is easily induced. Ever wondered why some UFOs have all those colored flickering lights around them? Rapid flickering light induces trance states. There are so many reports where the witnesses stated that they felt hazy, dream-like, or clearly stated that they were going into a trance state, after which they could not move. They call it paralysis but that is not the right word. Paralysis is a loss of muscle function. This is not the case with the UFO witnesses. They are standing but cannot move. They are in a trance state. Trance is an abnormal state of wakefulness in which a person is not self-aware and is either altogether unresponsive to external stimuli or is selectively responsive in following the directions of the person who has induced the trance. A witness who is put in a trance when a UFO lands, often sees the aliens coming out and telling him to walk to the vehicle, which they are able to do.

We are using here the term 'trance' for the state of mind the dimensionals, or ufonauts, are putting people in. It might not be the right word, but it is close enough to define that particular altered state of mind. It is a very effective tool for the dimensionals to take control over humans. In some events people remember seeing a light sphere, a flying saucer or alien before, during or after the encounter. But there are so many other cases where people suddenly find themselves at a much later time, and sometimes also at a different location without remembering what happened. Some of them were feeling an altered state of mind, similar to a trance, just before or after it. No UFO or entity was seen or experienced. Nevertheless, somebody did induce that trance, and whatever happened during the time of the trace is unknown. The loss of memory also happens with UFO sightings, and has become known as 'missing time'. It is not time that is missing, it is memory of what happened.

The ability to induce a trance from a distance, implies that the dimensionals have knowledge of the human brain, and can manipulate it as they see fit. It is not a comfortable idea that we are subject to these kinds of manipulations. They can make us see and hear whatever they want. They can tamper with our memories and perceptions. It is of utmost importance that we understand this. Also, because they don't really care about our well-being.

5.6. Illusions

The dimensional beings come from what the esoterics call the astral world, or etheric world. The astral world has long been known as a world of illusion. Not only because in this astral dimension one can assume any form one wants, but most clairvoyants or psychics can only access the lower astral planes where a lot of mischievous entities hang out. These entities are not only mischievous, but are also secretive and use illusions to divert our attention, to confuse us, and to foster false belief systems. With some exceptions, they cannot be trusted. Of course, they rely on our ignorance, stupidity and gullibility.

Some people do know about the reality and identity of these beings. Even some of the military people who have studied the UFO phenomenon know that the dimensionals are responsible for all these sightings. And some military people are also versed in esoterics. Their statements should not be ignored or branded as cover-ups.

In ancient times, man knew about these astral beings, and were weary about their manifestations. Nowadays, people get ecstatic when the aliens come down and ask to be beamed up. Not wise...

5.7. Misdirection

A lot about the UFO phenomenon is about misdirecting our attention. This is also the case with the appearance of certain strange beings. When so-called cryptic beings are seen, are they really beings, or just temporary manifestations? It almost seems as if these paranormal types are being used to frighten people away from specific areas, or, conversely, to attract hordes of people to those areas. While mobs of monster-chasers are combing one forest or swamp, UFOs are engaged in covert activities only a few miles away. They go unnoticed because everyone in the area was off in the other direction.

It's like a magician who makes you look at his right hand, so you don't notice what his left hand is doing.

5.8. Pursuing and Stalking

*I was driving down this highway one night with my boyfriend. We had just gone to buy something from someone, when we notice these super bright lights riding our tailpipe. Naturally I sped up a little as to create some following distance. I kept my eyes going back and forth on the review and the road to check up on the car, while my boyfriend only watched the car, turned around in his seat. The car follows for about a mile on this stretch of road in the middle of nowhere with no turnoffs. All of a sudden my boyfriend goes "Holy sh**" and I looked in the rear view right away; the bright lights are gone, and so is the car. He watched it disappear out of nowhere. I pulled over and there were no signs of the car anywhere. This freaked us both out because the headlights were similar to that of a cop car in our county, and for that to just disappear in thin air is odd. (Reddit)*

If aliens were extraterrestrials, one would expect that they would just land and make contact. Instead UFO beings like to pursue and stalk people.

It is actually nothing new. Practitioners of witchcraft and black magic can be bothered and stalked by spirits or entities. The fairies of old times did the same. The purpose of this is, of course, to induce fear. They like to scare the crap out of us.

The ufonauts like to pursue cars. It is not uncommon to see two lights following a car for some distance, then disappearing. In the day time, a light sphere can pursue a car, sometimes for a long distance, then appear above the car, or besides, or land into a field. In the woods, a light sphere just above the tree tops can follow a person for some distance. This is actually a form of stalking and letting people know that they are being stalked.

There are also accounts of drivers whose cars were attacked by monsters. When driving away, these entities were holding on to the door handle, or were keeping pace with the car, even at very high speeds. They might be physical looking beings but they can move effortlessly at any speed, because they are not limited to the physical laws of gravity.

What we know as ufonauts or aliens are actually etheric beings some of whom like to hang out at certain places in the woods, places they are very protective of. There are many stories of people who were walking in woods, when they feel they are being watched and followed, sometimes in a certain area, sometimes the entire time they are in the woods. This is often accompanied by a feeling of unease, fear, dread. A being is not always seen, but they can show themselves. These beings are of various kinds: bigfoot, Grey-type beings, mantis, reptilian, dog-man, and any other type.

People can also be stalked in street, and even in their houses. Dark robed entities on street corners, sasquatch rummaging through your garbage cans, shiny eyes peering through your bedroom window. Not to mention all those crazy beings who like to appear in your bedroom and just stare at you.

Another form of stalking is repeated phone calls with nobody on the other end of the line, or with strange voices or beeps, after a UFO/entity sighting. Even when the telephone number is unlisted.

UFO witnesses can also be visited by Men-in-Black, or non-existing officials, telling them to shut up, or ask elaborate questions. Especially if the witness happens to pick up a piece of metal left behind by the UFO.

I wonder if some of the entity encounters look like stalking but are actually just curious about who those strange humans are. In those cases the beings only observe as if they are studying the human witness(es), not from a scientific point of view but as a curiosity. In spite of this harmless behavior, the human witness(es) are usually afraid because they have no knowledge of dimensional beings, how to assess them, and how to interpret other phenomena that can accompany the event.

About a year ago, I was out back with my family. It was around 8 and the sun was setting. We lived in a farmhouse in the middle of nowhere, the closest neighbor was far away. Something down the field kept catching my eye but I ignored it at first. My sister saw it too and kept looking out towards the trees. She was getting freaked out about it. My mom said to go investigate, so me and my sister started to walk across the field towards the treeline. Big mistake...

It's hard for me to describe. This was the most terrifying thing that has ever happened to me. I didn't see it at first, and I didn't understand why my sister was so scared. Until we were about 100 yards away... When I saw this creature. Tall, probably 8 or 9 feet tall...white, humanoid with an elongated head... And no face. It had long arms and peaked around the trees. We stopped in our tracks. We couldn't tell what it was. It took a few steps further out of the trees and swayed back and forth at me like a praying mantis! Me and my sister ran screaming back to the house, where my mom stood, jaw dropped. She saw it too. I had never been so scared in my life. We grab the binoculars and watched this terrifying creature peak in and out of the tree line, spying on us... My grandma thought we all had a wild imagination...

The sun was almost gone now and it was getting really dark, and the darker it got, the more it moved. Back and forth along the trees. It was terrifying, so we went in for the night and locked everything up tight... I couldn't sleep that night. I was hearing scratching on the roof, and at one point, a very loud bang and various noises coming from the barn... I was very afraid that I would wake up to my animals missing... The next morning my grandma asked if we heard the loud bang outside that night... She ended up taking my grandpa with her on her morning walk.

I have no idea what it was and it haunts me to this day. (Reddit)

5.9. The Game of Trust and Deceit

When a person is psychic, he is usually targeted by the dimensional beings for life long interference. It often starts at childhood. In the beginning there are visual appearances. This can be an invisible friend. Nowadays, the being can appear as a typical Gray alien, but it can be any human form that the child will accept. This is done to form a bond of friendship with the child, and gain his trust. In some cases the child will be visited first by an animal form in his bedroom, and then later by a humanoid form. When the child grows up and become an adult, abductions and visitations to other planets can take place. Interactions is becomes more involved. Predictions are often given, about his personal life or world events, that all come true to the detail. But then it goes downhill. A major prediction will be given that will draw a lot of attention to himself, and/or his group of believers, and ... nothing happens. This has happened so many times. The dimensionals are laughing their butts off.

Other tactics can be played out too, such as interference in their love lives. This is not unusual. Or visits from the MIB.

One of the ways to establish a closer relationship based on friendship is that the dimensional beings are asking for help. Gnomes would ask for a women to assist with childbirth of gnome inside a hill. Gnomes are pretty friendly, unless you betray their trust. Fairies do the same, and they are more mischievous. The aliens of today have similar tactics. In simple contact cases, they ask for water. In abduction cases they need our genetics to create hybrids. So many abductees have seen 'their' hybrid children and feel so connected to them. The aliens explain to the abductee/contactee that they need his help to save their race as they have become sterile. They often need his help with the hybrid children who don't seem to fair well without human emotional contact. That also reminds me of a case in my own town; the man was visited by a group of beings over the span of a couple of years, because they needed his help to solve their problem of a dimming sun in their (inner earth) realm (see The Hermits of Hickory Hollow). His garage was burned down to the ground when they left.

You just can't trust them.

5.10. Animal Disappearances, Mutilations and Deaths

Although their main function seems to be to induce fear, the UFO entities are endowed with a low consciousness and can be dangerous. All too often dogs disappear in areas where the monsters are seen.

The Momo saga (in Louisiana, Missouri) began on July 11, 1972. The Harrison family lived in a house along what was then known as Marzolf Hill. On a hot summer day, 8-year-old Terry Harrison and his 5-year-old brother, Wally, were chasing their dog through the woods. Suddenly, 15-year-old Doris Harrison, who was inside, heard her brothers screaming, ran to the window and saw a creature she described as perhaps 7 feet tall with dark hair covering its face. It held a dead dog under its arm and blood -- apparently from the dog -- flecked the dark hair of the beast. (Southeast Missourian)

Cow mutilations have become well-known in the UFO community. On the famous Skinwalker ranch in Utah, the site of many kinds of anomalous sightings, UFOs and strange beings, the Sherman owners had many of their cows mutilated. Then one evening a blue orb appeared, what usually signaled trouble:

Tom was getting increasingly uneasy as the game of catch moved in the direction of a thick copse of trees a couple hundred yards to his south. He sensed that the orbs seemed to be steering the dogs toward the cover. A couple of minutes later the orb dipped to the ground and with almost languorous speed flew slowly among the trees. The snarling, eager dogs gave chase. Suddenly, Gorman heard sounds that chilled him to the bone: the unmistakable fear-filled yelps of dogs in mortal agony. Then an eerie silence. Nothing moved. Tom waited for his animals to return. After a couple of hours, he went into the homestead with a heavy heart. He decided not to look for them until morning. His worst fears were realized when he went down the following morning to inspect the copse of trees. A smell of burned flesh greeted his nostrils as he dipped his head beneath the low branches. Ten yards inside was a small clearing. Tears filled Tom's eyes. Three large circles of brown, driedout grass were in the middle of the clearing. At the center of each circle of shriveled vegetation was a blackish greasy mess. The stink of his incinerated dogs was awful. Tom rushed out of the copse, his mouth dry and his stomach heaving. Within hours, Tom had gathered his family and finally agreed, as they had insisted, to sell the ranch. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

When monsters and strange entities are around, it is not only dogs that disappear, other animals like chickens, sheep and cows disappear or are killed/mutilated. In one case a missing cow was traced by her footprints she left in the snow. She had been running away from something, although there were no other tracks. Then her tracks, while she was still running, suddenly stopped in the middle of a meadow. She had suddenly disappeared into thin air.

Missing and mutilated cattle (or other animals) are usually associated with sightings of light spheres. Somebody, with sophisticated tools, is cutting particular sections and organs from these animals. Many have tried to find a reason or purpose for this bizarre behavior, but it still remains a mystery. Maybe it is another form of intimidation from the side of dimensional beings, who do not want humans living in their territory.

Maybe they are also the cause of some of the mysterious disappearances of people. After all, some people have been attacked by monstrous creatures, and by light beams from light orbs. If monsters and other mysterious predators kill and run off with our pets and livestock, do they do the same with humans? Are some mysterious-411-missing people reduced to greasy blobs too?

5.11. Human Mutilations

A topic not many UFO enthusiasts will talk about. There is one documented case (in 1994, Brazil) of a man found with the same mutilations characteristics as with the animal mutilations. I was investigated by the police, and the police documents are available. Most disturbingly, autopsy revealed that the person was alive when he was mutilated. More information at AlienVideo.

The Tod Sees case is famous in ufology. This happened in Pennsylvania, USA. There are no autopsy reports available, but the circumstances around his death, and the FBI involvement strongly suggests that this was a human mutilation case, that the authorities did not want to become public. More information here.

Their job is to search for and then protect sites where human mutilation has taken place. The Human Mutilation Cover Up FULL Film 2014 Richard D Hall. This is not evidence, but it seems plausible that the governments would react this way to avoid panic.

5.12. Intimidation and Fear

The beings behind the UFO phenomenon, those who are of the more intelligent kind and who control the vehicles, the monsters and the events, have the ability to work totally clandestine, invisible, unnoticed. When they appear in our world, for whatever purpose, they can cloak their ships, the UFO occupants, and the entities/monsters involved also can cloak themselves and move invisibly among us. So why the display of overtly flashing ships and scary monsters jumping in front of your car?

Intimidation

It is an intentional display to induce fear and intimidation. "We are omni-powerful, and you humans are our victims". It is a display of their power over us. They can fly through our skies and we cannot catch them. They can appear and disappear at will, and we cannot follow them. They can paralyze us, manipulate our minds, and we cannot defend ourselves. They don't want to talk to us, because they know we would not follow their advice, and we like to shoot first and ask questions later. Maybe they don't have anything interesting to say to us at all. So they play a game of cat and mouse. Hover over military and nuclear installations with impunity. Disable ICBM missiles in their silos and in their flight. That would scare the crap out of the military commanders for sure.

Fear

There are areas where there is a lot of UFO and monster activity. These seem to be areas with so-called portals, doorways to other dimensions that the dimensional beings use to enter and exit our physical world. They also seem to be active in these areas, and they don't want people to be present. Sometimes these areas became settled, and houses and farms were built. Then we see a lot of fear tactics being used to drive the people out of these areas, such as over UFO sightings, appearances of strange entities and monsters who scare the crap out of people. Ranchers experience livestock mutilations, or disappearances. pets disappear. Poltergeist phenomena enter their homes.

The dimensional beings know that if they would just tell people to leave that area because they need it for their own purposes, people would not do it. So they resort to scare tactics.

Some people have learned to live with the presence of the dimensionals on their property. They left their fear behind, and accept the activity for what it is. That sometimes works, but in the end it is the dimensionals who have the last word. If they don't want you there, they will drive you nuts.

5.13. Nefarious Attacks

Shortly after eight o'clock one morning in October 1974, a teacher was taking a bath in a lake in northern Ceara when she heard a noise.<sup>5</sup> Looking up, she saw a UFO rise from the ground, move sideways and then come down the middle of the lake toward her. As it did, it shined a bright, blue light at her. She felt tremendous heat. Then the UFO flew away, zig-zagging toward the southwest. After the encounter, she was dizzy and nauseated, felt sharp pains and prickly sensations, and had slight burns on her back and arms and spots on her legs. Later, blisters formed on the burned areas, and she had nightmares about the incident. In the next six to eight months, she lost thirty-five pounds and stopped teaching. Her health has been poor ever since. (UFO Danger Zone, by Bob Pratt)

In the book UFO Danger Zone, by Bob Pratt (highly recommended book), there are numerous cases from Brazil in which the victims were outright attacked by light spheres and or their light beams, resulting in light to severe injuries of all kinds. These injuries were likely the result from the intense radiation. Why would dimensional beings harm and burn humans intentionally?

It is estimated that there were thousands of these cases in Brazil. Whoever the entities are behind these UFOs, they clearly do not care about our well-being. It rather looks like they know that are hurting people. The question is why would they do this? It is far beyond to give a message of warning. In some cases people never recovered, their previous healthy and prosperous life destroyed. Some crippled for life. Some people died as a result from their exposure to the radiation.

6.1. The Creation of a Cryptic Being

I was sitting in my car awaiting my next Uber/Lyft call. I was parked on the side of the road near Toll Booth Plaza 31 [Rosemont, Illinois]. It is a spot many drivers share. Drivers like to park to be close to the O'Hare terminals, which allows us to pick up rides from the airport. As I was sitting there, fiddling around my car. I saw something walk out of the trees. It was a tall creature about 6-7 feet tall and kind of hunched over. It walked with a sort of gait like almost a waddle. It was completely black when it swiveled its head. I saw two bright red eyes glowing. This thing opened a pair of large wings, as wide as it was tall and began to flap them. It took off and headed to the south toward that large indoor driving range and the baseball park. It was gone in a few seconds. (Source)

We like to collect data, make statistics and categorize the findings. With the collection of numerous reports of mysterious beings, animals, anthropomorphic creatures with an animal head, human-looking beings and humanoids, researchers came up with different names as they thought that they were dealing with distinct species. A lot of researchers still think that these are physical creatures, and try to prove that they still roam around on this planet.

The dimensionals can take any form they want when they appear in our world, from angels and fairies to monsters and aliens. They will usually take a form derived from our legends and mythologies. The nature elementals have pretty much adopted a well-established form, but many other elementals are not that particular in forming a well-defined cryptic shape. I am using the word cryptic in the sense of mysterious animal or human form that does not make sense in our physical world.

Some lower elemental or astral beings take a vague animal or human form, leaving out any details. We then see something like a dark human figure without a face, or even without a head. Headless black dogs are well-known in history.

More evolved beings will take more defined shapes, like a black panther, or a werewolf.

Even more evolved dimensionals are responsible for more elaborate appearances, for example, the now well-known Greys, reptilians, but also the mothman and chupacabra.

Appearances do not always reflect a distinct class of dimensional beings. Aliens have come in shapes and forms. This is because each time a dimensional being creates a form, it does so according to its own understanding of what that form should look like. I have read dozens and dozens of wolf-men, or werewolf sightings with detailed descriptions of this anthropomorphic figure. They are all different, and the differences can be substantial. Sometimes witnesses are not sure if the cryptic being was a wolf-man or a sasquatch, because it had features of both.

Because each appearance of a cryptic is an individual creation of a dimensional being. The number of 'species' we have tried to label, is large. We have several water monsters, prehistoric birds, werewolves, bigfoots (now categorized in five types), large cats and dogs, deer-men, dinosaurs, etc.

It is possible that some groups of dimensional beings have established forms to which they adhere, such as Reptilians. Such forms might be based on once existing physical life forms.

6.2. Temporary Cryptics

I assume that most of the cryptic beings we see are actual dimensional beings. With this I assume that they have an independent existence in one of the etheric or astral worlds, or any other dimension.

However, are some of them rather temporal manifestations of artificial elementals? I putting forth this question because, some of the cryptics, like wolf-men, sasquatch and other hairy monsters often appear in areas where there is a lot of UFO activity. If we, humans, can create artificial elementals, then highly evolved (not necessarily intelligent) dimensional beings can also create them. These are then used by making them materialize in our world and scaring people away from a certain region or diverting attention away from another region. Then those cryptic monsters only exists for as long as they are necessary. It is like creating a visual, and sometimes a material, hologram with a program, and then let it run for a certain amount of time after which it is dissolved.

These artificial elementals or cryptic beings can turn physical enough as to leave footprints, or scratches on people or cars. It would explain that these creatures always appear in an offensive mode, inducing fear, running toward a person, screeching, throwing rocks, even outright attacking people and cars although this is more rare. They do not show behavior of an ordinary intelligent being. They don't hide or run away; they often walk away calmly and disappear. They draw attention to themselves by attacking or their presence in an otherwise unlikely place for such a being, such as appearing near a airport or on a parking lot of a shopping mall.

I am speculating here, but it seems that these particular artificial beings, for the short time of their existence, can actually roam around and attack and kill other animals, like farm animals and pets. It is not unusual for pets to disappear during sightings of monsters or during a UFO flap. Not to mention the famous cattle mutilations (and mutilations of other animals, including the half cats of the last decade).

I know it can be quite a stretch to accept the existence of materialized holographic forms that can run around in our world and cause havoc, and to then disappear into nothingness. But, who knows, maybe one day our own scientists might come up with something that can do that.

6.3. Poltergeist

Because we like to categorize and label, we often put a certain phenomenon apart from all other phenomena, while in essence we are dealing with the same thing. Poltergeist is one of such labels. Often attributed to some bad spirits, poltergeist also happens with phenomena we do not associate with it at all.

Poltergeist also happens with UFO incidents. In classic poltergeist cases, the invisible entities reveal and discuss the intimate secrets of the victims in the presence of outsiders, indicating that they know everything about our life histories. Aliens too have revealed again and again that they know everything about the contactee's life.

Another common factor in poltergeist cases is the sudden materialization or disappearance of physical objects. Not only ordinary objects that vanish and appear at a later time, but also the mysterious falls of stones. UFO contactees often report the same kind of poltergeist phenomena shortly after they receive their first visit from the purported aliens, such as materialization and dematerialization of objects, mysterious beings appearing in their houses, strange sounds etc.

Not so common but a part of poltergeist are mysterious fires. It is traditional that haunted houses eventually burn to the ground. These dimensional spirits are not always malevolent. Some of them have reasons of their own to start a fire, and don't really care about the consequences for the human involved. With poltergeist anything in a house can suddenly catch fire, and in such a case it happens this happens frequently over days or weeks. It is part of inducing fear, but there might be other reasons too. Mysterious fires not only happen with poltergeist, but also in UFO cases, with UFO witnesses, researchers, and contactees, as UFO researcher John Keel pointed out. As an example of this, Keel said that "Soon after researcher Stephen Yankee acquired a microfilm copy of Morris K. Jessup's Varo Papers (a strange UFO document), his Michigan home went up in flames."

The famous Police Chief Jeff Greenhaw took a photo of a strange creature at a spot where a person claimed to have seen a flying saucer land, in 1973 in Falkville, Alabama. The picture showed a somewhat blurry humanoid figure in a metallic space suit. It was printed in newspapers across the world in the days that followed. Soon after his trailer home was burned to the ground.

Fires can be really disastrous, but the dimensional spirits who cause these fires don't care.

It is also important to mention that the intelligence behind the poltergeist activity reacts to the emotional states of the family members. The more they are upset or afraid, the more activity there is.

6.4. UFO Occupants

There are so many descriptions of 'aliens', or the beings seen through the portholes of flying saucers, or coming out of landed craft. UFO researchers have tried to categorize them in alien races, and yet, how they look like is not important. The dimensional beings can assume any form to suit the belief system of the witness or contactee.

There is one feature that is often used by the ufonauts, that we find with not only aliens, but also the airship occupants of the late 1800s and the earlier descriptions of devils and other spirits: the dark olive complexions, angular faces with pointed chins, high cheekbones, and slanted, Oriental-like eyes. Even the men-in-black often have this appearance.

Another interesting feature which turns up in many reports, both historical and modern, is that the fingers of these entities seem to be extraordinarily long, much longer and more slender than normal human hands.

Black clothing is also a standard. MIB wear them, but also many mysterious figures that show up along the road or at night. In our present days MIB are driving around in black cars, in the old times we had dark figures passing by in black carriages.

6.5. Monsters

On the evening of 25 October 1973, near Greensbury, Pennsylvania, a farmer named Stephen Pulaski and at least 15 other witnesses saw a bright red ball hovering over a field. Pulaski and two boys went to investigate. As they approached, their car headlights grew dim. Continuing on foot they saw the object glowing brilliantly with white light and either sitting on the field or hovering directly over it. It was about 100 feet in diameter, dome-shaped, and made a sound like a lawn mower. Screaming sounds could be heard nearby. Pulaski fired a tracer bullet, and two large apelike creatures with glowing green eyes, one seven feet tall and the other eight feet tall, were seen walking along beside a fence. They had long arms that hung down almost to the ground, were covered with long dark-grayish hair, and emitted a strong odour, like burning rubber. They seemed to be communicating by making whining sounds. Pulaski fired three rounds into the larger creature, which responded by whining and reaching out to its companion. At that moment, the craft vanished, leaving a glowing white area in the field. The creatures walked back towards the woods and were not seen again. Later on when other investigators arrived, a dog began tracking something unseen, several people smelled a strong sulphurous or chemical-like odour, and loud crashing sounds were heard coming from the woods. At this point, Pulaski went berserk and started running around, violently flailing his arms and growling like an animal. He had visions of a man looking like the Grim Reaper, heard his name being called from the woods, and made confused statements, such as: 'If man doesn't straighten up, the end will come soon.' Then he collapsed. He was later examined by a psychiatrist who concluded that the frightening situation had caused him to become temporarily unhinged and enter a dissociated psychological state known as a fugue. This case was one of an epidemic of at least 79 'creature' cases occurring in a six-county area of western Pennsylvania in 1973. They all involved werewolflike entities that mysteriously appeared and disappeared, and left few traces of their existence. There were some reports that they left tracks and emitted foul stench. There were also cases where they were said to have killed chickens, ripped the hindquarters off a St. Bernard dog, and torn the throat of a pet deer, but there were no reports of injury to humans. During the evening of 6 February 1974, a lady living near Uniontown, Pennsylvania, was sitting at home watching television. She heard a noise on her porch and went to investigate, thinking the dogs were to blame. She took a loaded shotgun with her to scare them away. She turned on the porch light, opened the door, and was horrified to see a seven-foot-tall hairy apelike creature standing only six feet away. Thinking it was about to attack, as it had raised its arms above its head, she fired into its middle. But amazingly, it 'just disappeared in a flash of light'. (David Pratt in Visitors from the Twilight Zone)

The above case contains several typical characteristics of a monster sighting: the presence of a glowing UFO, glowing eyes of the monsters, strong sulfurous smell, loud crashing sounds, the killing of chickens in the area, other animals being attacked, and disappearing in a flash of light.

Aside from aliens, ghost and spirits, the majority of dimensional intrusions is by the appearance of monsters. We use the term monsters in a broad sense: any mysterious humanoid creature that creates fear. They also come in many sizes and shapes. Some well-defined such as sasquatch and wolf-man, other are more ill-defined. They are not all hairy creatures, some can be skin and bones, or have a smooth black skin.

To make us believe they are real physical creatures, they often leave footprints. Most of the time, just one or a few, in some rare cases a longer track. It is not unusual that these tracks suddenly start at some place and suddenly stop at another place. Like the creatures, the tracks suddenly appear out of nowhere and disappear into thin air. Tracks are left by even dinosaurs (sightings) but the dinosaurs themselves are never found.

Monster beings are always elusive. In spite of sometimes numerous sightings, they can never be found or trapped or killed by occasional searches or monster hunts. When shot at close range they never bleed, or fall down. They walk away and disappear.

As I have mentioned before, they are probably temporary artificial elementals who are materialized, and made to roam around and do their job, which is to frighten people away from an area, or to misdirect people to another area by causing a lot of attention. It is also quite possible that a real elemental being is put into such an artificial elemental form to animate it for as long as is necessary to carry out the task at hand. When the real elemental being leaves the form, then the monster-form and substance falls apart and revert back to energy. Some monster have been seen disappearing into a flash of light.

Bigfoot or Sasquatch

Another time, Jim saw one of the hairy humanoids running beside the corral and he shot it with his rifle. He says he definitely hit his target, but the creature barely flinched. He found no blood or other trace at the spot of the shooting. When he chased after it, he heard a weird sound that resembled a soft whine combined with an electronic beeping noise. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

These are the monsters that have the body of a gorilla, but a more or less human face. They are seen worldwide, under many different names. In Europe this type was known as the Wild Man. The Native Indians of North America were well familiar with him too. In modern times, people began to assume that he was a real hominid being, hiding out in remote areas. But there are too many sightings of Bigfoot for that to be true. After all, in order to survive they would need whole families, many shelters, and a large area for foraging food. They would have been long captured or killed. And yes, Bigfoot has been shot many times, only to run away as if it didn't harm him, or to disappear into thin air, without leaving any blood trail.

Bigfoot, although it can appear as a solid being is not biological. Like so many other monsters and entities, he has been seen with glowing red or orange eyes, being half or totally transparent, disappearing into thin air, inducing fear in the witnesses, doing his scary act. There are even sightings of bigfoot together with Greys and Reptilians, outside and inside flying saucers. They are associated with poltergeist activity. They have been seen in areas of cattle mutilations. They show themselves intentionally, often with a lot of noise. Not the behavior of an ordinary hominid being.

By the way, we have plenty of hominid skeletons, but bigfoot skeletons have never been found.

Bigfoot lovers and hunters are not going to like it, but he is just part of the spectrum of monsters and weird dimensional entities, used by other beings for specific purposes.

Disappearing Dogs and Other Animals

Although their main function seems to be to induce fear, they are endowed with a low consciousness and can be dangerous. All too often dogs disappear in areas where the monsters are seen.

The Momo saga (in Louisiana, Missouri) began on July 11, 1972. The Harrison family lived in a house along what was then known as Marzolf Hill. On a hot summer day, 8-year-old Terry Harrison and his 5-year-old brother, Wally, were chasing their dog through the woods. Suddenly, 15-year-old Doris Harrison, who was inside, heard her brothers screaming, ran to the window and saw a creature she described as perhaps 7 feet tall with dark hair covering its face. It held a dead dog under its arm and blood -- apparently from the dog -- flecked the dark hair of the beast. (Southeast Missourian)

At the famous Skinwalker Ranch in Utah, the site of many kinds of anomalous sightings, UFOs and strange beings, the Sherman owners had many of their cows mutilated. Then one evening a blue orb appeared, what usually signaled trouble:

Maybe it is another form intimidation from the side of dimensional beings, who do not want humans living in their territory.

Materialization

Another word about the materialization of these creatures. One would assume by their looks that they are flesh and blood, but the (temporary) substance that they are made of is of a different make-up. It seems to be very hard and dense, as testified by people who have had physical contact with them in physical fights. John Keel reports: "In similar incidents in Sweden and South America witnesses have actually grappled with the furry spacemen and claimed the creatures were incredibly strong and so solid a knife deflected from their bodies."

Keep in mind that we are originally dealing with energy, which gets then formed and solidified. But this solidification does nor necessarily have to be the same a a normal biological body. The monsters, and by extension all other mystery creatures and humanoids, look visually like a normal biological being, but their 'physical' make-up is most probably some very dense form of energy.

In the book Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp, the authors relate an experience by the Gorman family who were approached by an unusually large wolf, that appeared friendly to them, but then suddenly attacked one of their calves. The following are quotes from the story that also shows that these cryptic animals are not blood-and-flesh and are not harmed by bullets.

"Get my Magnum," Tom barked as he aimed more kicks at the wolf's ribs. Even as the sickening thud of Tom's heavy boots rained into the animal's abdomen, the beast seemed unconcerned. Tad ran to the flatbed, retrieved a powerful handgun, and quickly delivered it to his father. Gorman took aim and squeezed the trigger. The shot rang across the field and slammed into the wolf's ribs. The slug from the .357 had no effect whatsoever on the attacking animal. It didn't yelp, didn't pause, and didn't bleed. Quickly, Tom pumped two more shots into the wolf's upper abdomen. On the third shot, the wolf slowly and reluctantly released the bleating calf.

... Three shots from a Magnum should have killed the animal or at least very badly injured it. Not a sound came from the wolf as it gazed unconcernedly at Gorman. The chilling, hypnotic blue eyes looked straight at him. Gorman raised the Magnum again and, aiming carefully, shot the animal near the heart. It backed off maybe thirty feet, still facing the family and still showing no signs of distress.

... "Get the thirty aught six," Tom said through clenched teeth, never taking his eyes off the huge beast. Tad ran to the homestead and returned in seconds bearing the heavy firearm. Tom had killed dozens of elk from over two hundred yards with this weapon. As he took aim at the wolf a mere forty feet away, he momentarily felt pity for the beast. The thunderous shot rang out. The sound of the bullet hitting flesh and bone near the shoulder was unmistakable. The wolf recoiled but stood calmly looking at Tom. His mouth went dry. He felt a cold sweat running down his back. Ellen began to cry. Ed began to curse softly under his breath, shaking his head in disbelief. The wolf should be a silent, bleeding pile of dead flesh. Instead, it had recoiled, backed off maybe ten feet, but still seemed perfectly healthy.

Tom took a deep breath and raised the weapon again, aiming for the huge chest cavity. The bullet ripped through the animal, and a sizable chunk of flesh detached from the exit wound and lay on the grass. Still the wolf made no sound. Then, with a last unhurried look at the stunned family, the wolf turned slowly and began to trot away across the grass.

They chased the wolf, which left deep tracks in the mud, all the way down to a creek:

About twenty-five yards from the river, the prints entered a muddy patch, and it appeared as if the two-hundred-pound animal had sunk almost two inches into the mud. The deep paw prints continued for another five yards and then stopped. The tracks simply vanished. So did the wolf. Gone. There was no possibility that the animal had leaped the intervening sixty feet to land in the river. The tracks just stopped abruptly.

I find this story interesting because the family had just purchased the property. It was as if the wolf made it clear that he was not going to harm them, but that they were not welcome. This, of course, implies an intelligence behind it.

A similar large wolf (four times the size of a normal wolf) with a large dog showed up at a later time at the ranch. As they were still thinking that these were natural animals, they complained at the local tribal office, only to hear that there were no wolves in Utah. The last wolf in Utah had been shot in 1929. Nevertheless, they saw the wolves a couple of more times in the distance.

Bright Glowing Eyes

Another interesting feature of monsters and mysterious dark figures is the bright self-luminous eyes. They are mostly red ("glowing like coals"), but orange and other colors have been seen too. Their eyes can also be unusually large.

Sometimes only the eyes are seen inside a vague, dark human-shaped outline. These are not reflective eyes, as with some night animals. The eyes themselves are sources of light. Knowing that these figures are just energy forms, what we see as eyes are not real eyes, but just two sources of light that are clearly meant to be seen and to be focused on. Witnesses are often fixated on those eyes, and that is the purpose as they induce a light hypnotic trance, after which the witness can be mentally manipulated. Luminous eyes are also known with the UFO occupants or aliens.

Smell

It is a well-known fact that sasquatch has an extremely pungent, nasty odor. It is often compared to a sulfur smell, or to rotten garbage. Less known is that many other monsters or mysterious creatures are also accompanied by such a sulfurous smell. It is not limited to one particular kind of being, but it seems to be a result of the physical manifestation of their energy which creates a sulfurous gas from the surrounding atmosphere. Sulfurous smells can also appear with the presence of light orbs.

Presence in Our Cities

Bigfoot or sasquatch is now well-known because of its many sightings all over the world. The problem is there are way too many sightings for it to be a physical hominid type of being. It is actually an identification we have given to a common monster sighting, a big hairy humanoid that appears mostly in woods, but also in our backyards and in very populated cities. If it was a roaming physical being it would have been captured long time ago, especially considering that it also appears at busy locations such as a Walmart store in a city, as in the account below.

RE (pseudonym) stated that in the Autumn of 2014 he was working as a long-haul driver for an express company. This particular evening, around 10 PM, he had stopped at a Pilot Flying J truck stop to gas up and take a break. He was traveling on I-81 south in Virginia, near Wytheville. As he was filling his rig, he noticed movement on a hill behind the truck stop. The area was lighted, so he was able to see the movement. He was curious, so after securing his rig in the lot he started to venture up the hill to get a better look. RE is a hunter and outdoorsman, so he was curious. As he stood on top of the hill, there was a Walmart in the valley below. There was also a shale pit that was well lit from the Walmart parking lot. He moved down the hill, until he noticed a huge hairy being walking along the edge of the pit. He was no more than 50 yards or so away, but was surprised at what he saw. The hairy hominid was approximately 9 ft. in height, very broad shouldered and gray in color. As it turned towards him, he could definitely discern that this was a female because of the large prominent breasts. She was carrying a 3 ft long thick log. As he watched her, she didn't seem to mind him being there. But it seemed like she was hunting for something...possible live food. RE whistled at her, but she didn't respond. After a few minutes, she walked into the wooded area at the far end of the shale pit and disappeared.

(Phantom and Monsters)

There are many other types of monsters that are seen in well-populated areas, and in the center of cities, in the streets, on the corners of streets, in back alleys, and in storm drains and sewer systems. They obviously don't live there. They appear where people are living.

Subconscious Manifestations

As a kind of afterword to this monster chapter, I wonder if some monster sightings are actually a manifestation of the fear aspect of the human subconscious. Monster sightings often occur in the woods by a couple who are not supposed to be together, or doing things they are not supposed to do. Also by teenagers who smoke weed. There is an underlying fear of doing something forbidden, and of being caught. If combined to a temporary anomaly of heightened magnetic or electromagnetic energies in the area, this might lead to a manifestation of these fears, in the form of visible entities, monsters or otherwise, rock throwing, also known in poltergeist, strange sounds like screeching, weird loud animal sounds, and light phenomena. Maybe we severely underestimate the interaction of our emotions, our suppressed psychological energies, individually but especially on a collective subconscious way, with the manifold energies of the Earth, resulting in temporary, short-lived apparitions, manifestations, and events.

6.6. Bedroom Invaders

I was in bed, awake, and my fiancé was sleeping next to me. My daughter asked if she could sleep in my room so I made her a little bed on the floor next to me. She fell asleep and I was awake playing games on my phone and stuff. I had just decided to try to go to sleep and I turned to lay on my right side facing my fiancé when I got an instant feeling that something was in my room. I turned back to my left and saw a hooded figure flying across my room at high speed, heading in my direction. It was about 3 feet tall and wearing a brown hooded cape. It had its head down with the hood hiding its face. I instantly got that mama bear adrenaline right as it was hovering over my daughters head, still heading towards me. I lunged out of bed waving my fist at it. This made it back off a bit and it just stood still near my daughters feet. I was pissed because I didn't want the thing anywhere near my daughter. So I lunged at it again and it backed up near my closet and just faded away.

Fast forward to the next day. I live on the same property as my parents, but in a different house. I was having coffee at their house in the morning and my dad said that he had a crazy experience the night before. He said that a figure was in his room and came right up to his bed. He just laid there kinda in shock and the thing reached out and grabbed him. He said when it grabbed him it sent out these powerful vibrations and it just felt like he and everything in the room was vibrating in slow waves. The way he described it, I'm sure it was the same thing I saw in my room. (Reddit)

Monsters, aliens and other cryptic beings not only appear in remote locations or deep in the woods, they also like to intrude into our lives by violating our bedroom privacy. Actually they like to roam around the entire house.

It is actually common for people to see strange beings appear in their bedroom. Most of them just stare at them, but others like to frighten or heavily interact with the person. It is quite understandable that most of these sightings go unreported out of fear for ridicule or worse being considered mentally unstable.

There are also plenty of accounts of heads or eyes peering into the bedroom window, even if the bedroom is on the second floor. In the following account it is not just a face that appears but there is also knocking and a hand-print left, and to make it un-earthly: no foot prints.

I was camping with my daughter at my dad's house. He lives in the middle of nowhere, hours away from any town. We were sleeping in a trailer outside his house. I heard footsteps in the grass because I had the windows open (it was hot). I thought it was my step-mom trying to spook us because she's done that before. I grabbed the flashlight, anticipating to catch her by surprise, when the knocking started. I said, 'Hello,' thinking she might have something to tell us, and the knocking stopped. I waited for her to say something, but she didn't. My daughter screamed then, as a face appeared in the window above her bed. She said, later, that it looked like a child with white eyes, but it must have been floating because the windows were too high up for a child to look through. She slept with me the rest of the night. I kept thinking I heard footsteps and tapping on the trailer throughout the night. When I woke up the next morning, we found hand-prints on the glass but no footprints around the trailer or tracks in the mud. When I told my dad about it, he laughed and said we must have been imagining things. My step-mom swore she didn't go out that night. Still creeps me out till this day. (Phantom and Monsters)

Most of these bedroom sightings are one time occurrences. Ghosts of dying or deceased people are quite benign. The appearance of for example a grinning man is more puzzling. Some 'alien' types are quite intrusive, manipulative and forceful. The latter types tend to appear frequently, often throughout one's entire life.

Paralysis of the body can occur, during which the person cannot move a muscle, which is frightening when there is a weird entity in the room. The term paralysis is often used for this condition, but the right term is akinesia, the inability to initiate voluntary movement. This also happens with some UFO and alien/monsters encounters. It seems that their appearance causes this particular bodily effect, or it might be intentionally initiated.

It is also possible that in some of these cases the witness has had an induced mental experience. The dimensional entity projected a visual scene into the mind of the person. The experience of seeing an entity in the bedroom is a real experience, but the entity itself was not there, or not visible. It actually projected a mental image into the mind of the person.

Bedroom intrusions can also be accompanied by a nasty odor, just as with monsters sightings in the woods.

It should also be mentioned that people who are heavily interested in esoteric subjects and dimensional entities, will attract such entities who will happily appear in their bedrooms.

6.7. Contrary to What We Would Expect

Most people believe that UFOs and aliens are physical extraterrestrials who are visiting this planet. If this would be true, then they would behave and seek contact with us humans according to what we expect such beings would do. But they don't. They often behave contrary to what we expect.

They do not randomly show up. UFO activity is concentrated in the same areas year after year. They do not make openly contact. The objects often linger for hours in one area, and then they are gone. This has been going on for centuries. They don't contact governments, but ordinary people.

What is the point of appearing to an ignorant farmer and telling him that humans must stop wars? Most contacts are made in remote areas, mostly at night, where very few humans live. This is not the way another (space) people would establish political, economic, cultural or military relationships.

There should be more sightings in densely populated areas, where the chance of being seen is higher. In reality the opposite is true. The objects still apparently prefer remote sectors such as hill country, deserts, forested areas, swamplands, and places where the risk of being observed is the least.

The majority of the sightings are between 7:30 and 9:30 P.M. But throughout rural America, most of the population is at home and planted in front of the TV sets at that hour, particularly on weekday nights.

Although they make themselves visible with their brilliant light and flashing lights, and even landings, they usually they take off the moment they have been discovered, or they inexplicably disappear into thin air! They obviously don't want to be caught.

All this points to a clandestine but deliberately staged encounters where they can interact with a person without being disturbed.

Instead of intelligent conversations with highly evolved extraterrestrial races, the contacts contain very little conversations, which are usually very mundane and often don't make any sense.

6.8. The Scare and Attack Pattern

One evening back in high school, a couple of friends and myself drove out to a very rural spot to get stoned and hang out. There wasn't a lot to do in my small hometown in rural Indiana, so these "country cruises," as we called them, to random locations was normally the highlight of our weekend. There were lots of these spots that we frequented, some more secluded than others.

We decided to go to a spot known as "Green Valley." It was a public lake and fishing area, so it technically closed at dark. Not that it mattered because there isn't a gate, and cops rarely came there. Plus there is a lot of Jeep trails that lead back into the woods, so if you're in a 4 wheel drive vehicle, (which we were) it is fairly easy to find a spot to park and be hidden from view.

By the time we had arrived it was nearly dark. So we pulled into the main area of the lake, drove around the back side, and entered the woods via Jeep trail. It had been raining a few days before. The trails were muddy even without rain, and had deep ruts in some spots from past visitors who were there "mudding." (Yes, it's exactly what it sounds like, we drove big trucks and jeeps through mud pits in the attempt to get the vehicle as dirty as possible. Like I said VERY small town). We didn't want to get stuck, so we stayed relatively close to the entrance of the trail.

We drove back far enough to be hidden from view, killed the Jeep, turned on the radio, and proceeded to roll up a few joints. My two girlfriends and I smoked and talked and laughed about meaningless random things. We were having a good time, when suddenly something hit the hood of my Jeep. Not loudly, but enough to make me look in the direction of the noise. I rolled the window down, but didn't hear or see anything, and my friends seemed to not notice.

I continued our conversation when a few moments later another small ting sound came. This time on the windshield, and my friends heard it as well. After they questioned what the noise was, I decided to be the brave one and investigate. I assumed it was most likely acorns or walnuts falling from the trees overhead. I turned on the headlights, opened the door, and stepped out. After looking at the hood of my Jeep, I noticed a small grey rock lodged near the windshield wipers. I picked it up and showed them. We immediately recognized the rock. The front parking lot of the lake was made entirely of them.

I quickly climbed back into my Jeep and rolled up the window. Assuming someone was messing with us, we decided it was time to pack it up and head out. (Lots of meth heads around the area, and we were not trying to get robbed or stabbed in the woods by one). I started the Jeep, turned off the radio, (I know I'm not the only one who turns down the car radio when treacherous situations arise) and began to carefully navigate down the short trail towards the back of the lake. All of sudden we were barraged with rocks, much larger than the initial ones. All hitting the driver's side of my vehicle. I would have been pissed but right as I let out my initial "What the f*ck?!" We heard a sound I'll never forget. I'll never do the sound justice, as it's almost impossible to explain. It was a loud "roar." The only thing that's ever came remotely close to it for me, was when I heard a male lion roar at a feline sanctuary I visited with my husband years later. It was full of base, and lasted roughly 7 seconds or so. It was also fairly close. It was time to get the hell out of there. I floored it. We had almost reached the trail entrance and I was driving way too fast, when suddenly something slammed into the side of my Jeep. Hard enough to make me fishtail a bit, followed by the same sound we heard the first time, only higher pitched. Almost like it had been injured. I slammed on the breaks, and the typical panicked conversation began between us. You know the one. WHAT THE HELL WAS THAT? DID WE HIT A DEER? THAT WASN'T A DEER! OH SHIT! LETS GO! I quickly continued down the trail and was finally in view of the lake, when my friend in the backseat started screaming, "LOOK! LOOK!" My friend in the front seat and I looked out of my driver's side window to see a "man" running through the woods towards the lake. I only say man because it most definitely was on two legs, and had the shape of a person. Only this person was moving at an unnatural speed through deep mud and trees and thorn bushes. And their proportions seemed to be greatly off. Longer arms and legs with an average torso. We watched in silence as the man reached the edge of the lake, bent over and began running on "all fours" using his hands, and leaped into the water. This was early October and while it wasn't freezing, the water was definitely ice-cold. We got the hell out of there. Drove 70 mph on the back roads until we reached town. At the first gas station we pulled over and got out of the Jeep. There was a small dent near the back end on the drivers side. I lied to my parents and said I had backed into a pole. We decided it was best to not tell anyone, as we didn't want to sound insane. But every time I looked at the dent, I thought about it. (Phantom and Monsters)

This account have several typical characteristics for monster accounts. A couple of kids hanging out in the woods, at night. Going to a location where they don't want to be found, whatever they are doing. A loud, angry, animal sound. The throwing of rocks, usually attributed to Bigfoot, but this can also happen without any Bigfoot sighting. The rock throwing is also known in poltergeist cases. The long arms are very typical for those strange entities, monsters or not. And, of course, attacking the witnesses.

Monsters have a curious pattern. They scare people away, they run up to them as to attack. When the witnesses are inside a car, the monster can leave the necessary scratches and dents. They utter frightening screams what will make people turn around and flee the scene.

They don't have to be awful monsters, all kind of weird beings have the same behavior. Even the entities appearing in bedrooms can behave in frightening ways, without attacking. Just appearing and staring in one most private environment is frightful enough. Peeking through a bedroom window will make people obviously afraid. Sometimes people will hear them running around on the roof of their house.

Actually UFOs as light orbs or flying saucers have the same behavior. A typical scenario on the road at night, is two light resembling the headlights of a car following a driver; then suddenly a brilliant light is on top of the car. UFOs like to chase cars, follow them at the same speed parallel to the road at the right or left of the car.

John Keel found that "A great many of our "monster" sightings occur in Lovers' Lanes, when the creatures suddenly shuffle out of the bushes and terrify young people. A majority of our low-level UFO sightings also take place under similar conditions. There is a built-in silencing factor in these cases, since, very often, the young lovers are not supposed to be there in the first place, or they are adults cheating on their mates. They cannot reveal their sighting without exposing their indiscretion. This is the main reason why so many of those witnesses who do report their sightings insist on total anonymity."

Do some dimensional beings just like to scare the hell out of us? A kind of entertainment for them?

UFOs also like to chase airplanes, coming at them at incredible speeds to veer away just in time to avoid collision.

6.9. Winged Entities

My story is a short one to tell because it all took place in a matter of moments, but it felt like time droned out when it happened. I was 16 at the time and I had made it a regular habit of sneaking out at night and hanging out with friends, like most teenagers my age I suppose. This night I was with my boyfriend at the time and we were just taking a stroll around my neighborhood in northern California. Keep in mind I may have been sneaking out but I didn't drink or do drugs, so my judgment was completely unaltered. It was 3 a.m. and we were on a fairly lit street, when out of no where I heard a distinct whooshing sound coming from up above us, it sounded like strong wings flapping. I looked up and was horrified to find what looked to be exactly like what The Jersey Devil is described as. He was flying low so I got a real good look at him. His wing span was the size of a small car and he looked to be 7 1/2 feet tall at least. The legs and head looked like that of a beast's, but the torso was a big man's with broad shoulders. I saw his wings flap again once but he mostly glided rather gracefully, but that's the only part about him I would describe as "graceful". I screamed out "Oh my God look!" within the first two seconds. And my boyfriend got a real good look at him too. I think the demon, creature, whatever heard me because when that happened he swooped down below the telephone pole and he disappeared as he passed the wiring. Keep in mind this was a well lit area with no trees. We should have seen him pass the other side clearly, but as his body passes the electric wire he vanished like he was going through a door or something. I didn't sneak out anymore.

(True Ghost Tales)

Winged entities seems to be a class apart, but they display the same characteristics as the other dimensional monsters. I have written about the chupacabra (The Chupacabra: Intelligent Bipedal Predator), no not the hairless dogs the media portrays, but the strange looking reptile-like being. They come in different varieties, but that is due to how the beings create the form they want to appear in. It does seem to be a particular type of entity (maybe an artificial elemental) that can hang around for extended times. This is probably due to the fact that it is known to feed on animal blood. Wherever the chupacabra is seen, livestock in the area end up dead with holes in the skin through which all the blood is sucked out.

Mephistopheles: This rhetoric of thine to me Hath a somewhat bombastic savor. Any small scrap of paper's good. Thy signature will need a single drop of blood.

Faust: If this will satisfy thy mood, I will consent thy whim to favor.

Mephistopheles: Quite a peculiar juice is blood.

Goethe in Faust

I think the Chupacabra, the Mothman, and Jersey Devil are the same kind of entities. I have also read of other, usually dark skinned, winged entities on the roof of houses looking down on the owner of the house. Quite frightful. In past ages they would simply have called it the Devil or a demon.

The wings do not serve any purpose as they are not used for normal flight as birds do. Winged entities have been seen flying through the air, without flapping their wings, and even 'flying' parallel to a car that was driving well above the speed limit, and effortlessly keeping up the speed. The chupacabra is also known for jumping straight up as a helicopter and then suddenly disappear. Wings cannot be used for straight up flights. Some of them have glowing eyes, like other kinds of dimensional entities.

Winged entities are always quite frightful to behold, and even more so because they instill the fear of an aerial predator. A predator that can come at us from above is more intimidating than one on the ground.

It is even more frightening when you find one on the roof of your house. I have come across several of these accounts. Even if they have no wings, or wings are not seen, I think they belong to the same class of the chupacabra or mothman. I think these entities are attracted to some negative energy that is present in the house. As you can see in the following account, the woman was into horror stories and the paranormal.

Hey everyone, so this is my first post here and I thought I'd make it about an experience that happened about 4 years ago. To this day I keep wondering what happened to come across my sister, it was winter time here in the suburbs of Northern Virginia, I live with my family in a neighborhood not far from Washington DC, so it's not to say we're in the middle of nowhere. Although, our home is very close to a few decently large wooded parks. One night I was at my then-girlfriend's place up near the city, I got a phone call from my sister around 7pm, which in winter time makes it pretty much nighttime here. I didn't think anything of it, usually she calls me for random things she needs my insight on. A bit about my sister, ever since she was little she loved horror movies, growing up with her I can tell you firsthand that she isn't easily scared, she loves the paranormal.

Alright so back to the call, I picked up the phone and first thing I realized was her voice breaking up, she was sobbing and could barely talk clearly. Instantly my mind started rushing with horrible thoughts about what could have happened, she kept telling me to come home, as soon as possible. I asked her why? Is everything okay? She wouldn't say, she just kept asking me to come home. Obviously I got in my car and rushed home. The neighborhood is very dim, there aren't many lights, only the few solar powered garden lamps from surrounding homes. As soon as I got home I ran inside, asked her again what happened? And she finally started explaining. About half an hour before she called me, she went outside to grab a few things from her car, again, it was dark out but when the car is unlocked the headlights turn on. When she opened the door to the car, the light was shining from the driveway to the roof of the garage, she noticed it first from inside the car. A short, bipedal, human looking thing, standing on 2 jet-black muscular legs, at first she said she thought it was a raccoon but this would have been obvious to her, but this thing, it scared her to the point of crying, while she was in the car, her view was obstructed from the rest of the creature, which was crouching, and from what she described, it was scratching at something on the roof, trying to get in? Maybe, but she wasn't going to stick around to find out. She got out of the car pretending to not have spotted it, this thing..it acted in a seemingly intelligent way. She thought "maybe if I act as if I didn't see it, it will just stay up there on not try to attack or anything" but as she walked behind the car, she heard it stand up right. Startled, she looked directly at it, the whole description she told me was as follows:

-Jet black, smooth dolphin skin like legs and arms.

-5 digit hands and no claws

-Dread looking very dirty fur/hair? Covering its head/body.

The face, is what was disturbing. The face had 2 shining yellow eyes that glowed from the car's headlights, no nose, just 2 slits. And a very wide mouth with no lips.

She took off when she made eye contact. As soon as she was indoors she called 911 and an officer was dispatched to our house. He looked around back and tried to see if there was any damage or sign of someone climbing the roof, no footprints, no damage. It was all in place. The officer just told us to lock the doors and windows and left. It's not like my sister to be terrified to the point of calling the police. Whatever this thing was though, I can only imagine what it was actually like to witness something like it in real life. To this day, both me and her get extremely uneasy arriving home after dark. (Reddit)

6.10. Roaming Cryptics

A couple of years back, I was driving back from an ex-partners house at about 11 pm, in rural Lancashire in the north of England. It was late November from what I remember so it was a clear night, with a big bright moon and very cold out (for England at least). To get to my home, you have to cut off the motorway and take a slightly rural route up a wooded road! It's not a large or dense wood, you can probably walk from one end to the other in 15-20 minutes, it's roughly a 5-minute drive through the trees!

As I was driving along, the road twisted and turned as it always had the hundreds of other times I had used it, so I had to drive very slowly (15-20mph) in case a car came around a bend too fast (there's always accidents there) and so I was raising and dipping my headlights and full beam as you do. As I turned a corner, about 30 feet in front of my car was a large, scrawny, grey figure. At first, I thought it was a large branch that had fallen from the tree, so I crept towards it and put on my full beam. When I got within about 10 feet of it, the creature (or whatever it was) moved as though it was doing a press-up, pushing itself up with its arms, and my headlights caught its eyes which glowed like cats do when you shine a light at them at night!

I stopped the car, half expecting it to just be a deer and run out of the way, but the creature didn't move, it just stayed stationary, staring at me, giving me a good 10-15 seconds to look at it. It slowly stood up on two legs, still looking at me in the car. It was BIG, the top of my car probably only reached the lower rib cage region, so I'd estimate it was probably 9-10 feet tall. It was pale grey, hairless and gaunt. I could see its rib cage and spine. It had LONG bony arms, probably each about 4 feet long, and large claw-like hands. (The closest comparative description I could give is the grey, bony werewolf in the third Harry Potter movie).

*Once I had taken all this in and realised the situation, I began to panic, putting my car in reverse, but the creature then just turned and walked calmly, and silently, off into the woods next to the road. It did not run, it didn't seem scared or intimidated, it almost seemed disinterested. I didn't hang about to investigate the area, I went straight home and locked the door! I spoke to all my friends, all but one of them thought I was joking, but she seemed to take it very, very seriously, having had a similar experience in a similar area a few years ago! She mentioned the work Skinwalker, something I had never heard of before. She said it was a bad omen, and after doing some research I can understand why! (Phantom and Monsters)*

Some strange entities are different from those described in the above chapters. When encountered, they do not scare or attack, they actually seem to be indifferent to the observer. They come in all shapes and forms, from humanoid forms to cryptic large cats. They are not physical beings but dimensional creatures who for some reason became visible, or maybe the witness is psychic enough to see them, while other people would not have seen them. That would explain why these kind of creatures are usually surprised that they have been spotted. Most of the time, they are calm. They look at the witness as to assess his intentions, and when they see (or is it feel?) that the witness is not out to get them, they just leave the place, cloak themselves or disappear into thin air.

There have been some accounts of such beings that are or turn translucent; see my article of Translucent Beings.

6.11. Black Creatures

So when I was about 6-7 years old . My family and I lived in a small house close to a church which we attended weekly and I would usually play around the church and around my house riding my little purple bmx looking bike. Also to mention this area is fenced off so no one could enter it without having an actual key. Now I would ride my bike thinking I'm the fastest biker ever and trying to pull off tricks which I knew I couldn't achieve. So one day I told my mom hey mom I'm gonna ride my bike while riding around in the autumn weather I made a circle to the gate and back to the church about 2-3 times and so the last time I went to the fence and was heading back to the church I was astonished that as I was closing in to the church there is an almost vantablack black dog that had a shiny kind of face with red eyes. My body froze up while letting the bike get closure to it which felt like an eternity. I stopped abruptly and jumped off the bike and ran to my house (I don't understand why I jumped off and ran when I'm faster on bike than on foot). This thing was chasing me. I ran inside the property slammed the gate of the house behind me and ran inside the house and slammed the door as well and just sat on the floor screaming for my mother. She came right away, and she asked what's wrong I replied instantly yelling a big black dog is chasing me, my mom looked through the door which to note had glass windows and saw nothing at all. She told me she saw me riding around but didn't see me being chased by anything. I was scared of going outside for a few days even had my dad and I walk around the property, and we didn't see a sign of the dog anywhere it could have entered/exited. Till this day I swear I saw that dog and I can still see its face in my memory and will never forget it. (Reddit)

(Vantablack is a black commercial coating that absorbs up to 99.965% of visible light.)

In the above account, it is quite possible that the black dog is not otherwise visible to normal people, but children are more psychic and attunes to other dimensions, that they often see entities that adults don't see. It should also be mentioned that there are legends of black dogs appearing near, and inside churches even killing people.

The inside of the door of Holy Trinity Church in Blythburgh (England) bears scorch marks left by a black dog who appeared there in the 16th century killing two people. These scorch marks add to the authenticity of the account, because, as we will see in chapter 9, intrusions of entities from the other dimension throw off intense radiation that can leave burns on soil, vegetation and people.

Maybe it sounds not believable that a black dog would appear in a church, but we have to keep in mind that most of the churches were built on ancient pagan sacred spots, which themselves were locations of heightened earth energies. Rituals on the ancient spots might have created a black dog entity in the first place, an artificial elemental (see chapter 4) that was meant to protect the place. Black dog sightings also appear in stone circles.

Historically, there are plenty of accounts of sightings of black dogs, black cats, devils in black coats and black hats, black humanoids in the woods, and even black sea serpents. Not to mention the Men-in-Black, those visitors who are dressed all in black and ride in black limousines. In past centuries we had the horseman dressed in black riding a black death coach pulled by black horses. Sometimes the horseman was headless. Curiously, there are also plenty of accounts of headless black dogs.

Of course there are plenty of exceptions. Creatures and humanoids in grey or even all white are also seen, but black seems to be a standard.

So, why black? Is it because we humans consider black to be a 'negative' color, and the entities just adjust their appearance to our belief systems? Or did we consider black a negative omen because of the appearances of black creatures?

Black is actually not a color, it is the absence of any reflective color when the substance absorbs all colors of the light spectrum. Maybe those entities absorb all light when they appear in our world?

A lot of these black entities also had glowing red eyes, another characteristic of dimensional beings.

Black dogs are traditionally seen in England or Western Europe, but these entities are not bound by nationalities. The following account is from the USA:

I believe my husband and I saw a Hellhound.

We live in rural northern Idaho. And we both hunt. So we know everything about animals, even in pitch darkness.

We don't have normal plumbing. We have to turn on an electric well every morning to fill it up. Our tank can last us three to four days, but we like it filled, just in case. There are other tanks like that scattered in the woods. Just waiting for someone to buy the land and build a home. We were taking a walk and it got dark, so we went back home. However on our way home we saw something, not human or animal, near one of the wells. It was hunched over like it was eating. We walk carefully closer, about 20 feet from this thing. Trying to figure out what it is. Too large for a stray dog or wolf and too small for a bear. But whatever it was, it looked at us with red eyes. I've never been more scared in my life. My husband is scared of nothing, and he was scared to. We took off running. My God we never ran so fast in our lives.

It did chase for a while, then it just disappeared. We got to our house and it was just gone. We knew it was behind us when we left the woods, but we couldn't see it. We locked all the windows and door that night. We talked to one of the town locals about the thing we saw. He showed us a picture of a Hellhound. He told us stories about people meeting the Hellhound in the same area. Always near a well, roads, crossroads, or places of death. Seeing him once will bring us happiness, seeing him twice will bring us sorrow, and seeing him three times will bring us death.

I don't know what we saw, but Hellhound is the only explanation.

(Phantom and Monsters)

6.12. Storm Drains and Sewers

I live in Tennessee, it appears that there are lots of creatures that live in tunnels. I was in a storm drain over near the Spring Hill area. I jumped in to it to try to explore a bit as I like urban exploring. I went into it 50-60 feet. It was a large flood diversion tunnel it seemed, 10 feet wide by about 5 foot up. There were small diversion tunnels from the streets into it, I watched them closely as I walked for a bit until one of them had a footstep like sound in it, I looked over and saw eyes glowing, I shouted "Hey! Who are you?" I heard a scratchy screech and a piece of rebar falling along with cement falling and scratches before I bolted it out of there. Scariest part is when I got towards the end of it to get back out I heard the same scratchy high-pitched screech out of a second tunnel right next to the opening.

(Reddit)

Should it surprise us that weird entities are also seen in storm drains and sewers?

Dark, negative entities seem to like to hang out in places with equally dark energies, so why not in those underground structures? Also, people, other than workmen, who seek out these places, are already in a lower mental state, and the dark environment also lends a hand in being able to see beyond the physical dimension and have a frightening encounter with such beings.

6.13. Strangers that Disappear

During the time period when my brother and I were roommating together in the apartment that I would later nickname 'The Vortex' in Rancho Santa Margarita, CA some strange things began happening with my reality outside of the apartment as well. One morning while I was walking along the sidewalk at the plaza located at the lake in Rancho an older woman called out to me, "I made a new year's resolution to bend over 50 times a day!" with a big chipper grin. Talk about totally random. She was about ten feet from me, standing between two cars in the parking lot. Nobody else was around, just us two, so her comment was definitely directed towards me. I glanced away for a second, thinking "ohhhkaaaayyyyy...." Then glanced back. Now she was gone. But there wasn't enough time for her to have gone anywhere. She just....disappeared into thin air, poof. (In 2 Worlds)

So I had parked my car behind this corner art store by my house. In order to get to the front door, you had to walk along this sidewalk very close to this busy street. I was walking towards the corner where the front entrance was when a woman grabbed my arm and clearly said something, but I couldn't understand it at all. She had a taller, darker woman next to her as well. I remember saying something like "no thank you" and kept walking. Of course, I look back immediately, and they've just disappeared. There's no where for them to have gone at all. It's either the busy car traffic to the right or the wall of the store to the left. Super weird, never really been able to explain it. (Reddit)

Dimensional beings can also appear in all sorts of 'normal' human appearances in otherwise normal settings, for whatever reason. These are usually one time events, but I have seen stories where the being would appear again years later, and/or to other family members. It seems that these beings, or is it just manifested energy, are linked to these people or families. The abnormality of the event is not only in their unusual appearance, but also in their often disappearance in a blink of an eye. The crazy thing about these events is that people have no clue why it happened or what is the meaning behind it. Maybe there is none.

I have read several stories of people seeing someone walk behind a tree and never reappear at the other side of the tree. It seems to be a well-established play from the side of the dimensionals to grab someone's attention and make a deep impression. In the following example, it served to initiate a plethora of paranormal activity. It's like saying "He, look we are here and we are going to spook the hell out of you."

It wasn't until 1969 that the family experienced its first "paranormal" event on the farm. Susan Smith says she heard the family's dogs "throwing a fit." She responded and saw that the animals were barking ferociously at a boy who was walking along the road in front of the farm. The boy appeared to be Hispanic or Indian, was wearing blue jeans and a blue shirt, and made no sound. As he walked along, he passed behind a tree on the edge of the property, but he never re-emerged on the other side of the tree. After a few minutes, Susan ran to check on him, thinking he might have tripped or otherwise hurt himself. The boy wasn't there. He had simply vanished. Susan was so upset by the strangeness of the encounter that she ordered the tree to be cut down. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

6.14. Malevolent Entities

Tribal police officers say an inordinate number of drowning cases have occurred in Bottle Hollow over the years, and at least some of them are unofficially attributed to the presence of the mystery snake. One case that was investigated by police involved the death of a Ute woman who was swimming at night with a male companion. Witnesses on the beach said the woman screamed that something in the water had grabbed her and was pulling her under. Her companion told officers that he dove under the water and grappled with a huge snake in an effort to free the woman, but she was dead by the time he got her back to the surface. Obviously, there are other potential explanations for what occurred that night, but the witnesses on the beach supported this version of the event and investigators took the report seriously. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

Bottle Hollow is an artificial reservoir in Uintah County, in the state of Utah. I have read other stories of people feeling that they are pulled under water in even small lakes, and barely managed to escape from drowning. In whatever form certain malevolent entities appear, they intend to harm or kill their victim. These encounters might be rare, but one wonders if some of the mysterious-411-missing cases in which the person was never found or found dead (often with no cause of death) were the victim of such malevolent entities. Some people were lured into the woods by sounds, voices or strange animals and found themselves in a trance. When they were able to break their trance they felt in immediate danger and fled the scene. You can find these stories all over the world. It seems that some dimensional entities don't like humans in their territory, and they don't mind killing them.

It is not for nothing that when people encounter strange cryptic beings, they often feel an instinctual fear. This can be mostly attributed to the total alien nature of the being (fear for the unknown), but in some cases the being exuded pure malevolence.

7.1. Basic Weirdness

"The most important of these incidents occurred on the evening of 20 November 2008, when after three objects disappeared at incredible speed, the undersigned officer, Sgt. William and Sgt. Waldir returned through the cane fields of the village of Sao Bento. We saw two luminous beings, nearly 90 centimeters tall, making their way through the canes. We were aboard a Mitsubishi pickup driving along a rural road when Sgt. William saw something in the bushes. He turned vehicle number 13533 toward the 'luminous beings'. When we got closer (15 or 20 meters), they began sliding between the canes. We were driving at around 20 km/h, and they remained ahead of us and to the right. It was noticeable how those things 'walked' without touching the ground. We saw no feet, no fingers, yet we saw arms, legs and oval-shaped heads. While luminous, [the beings] did not shed any light."

The report continues, stating that Sgt. Waldir Araújo Silva made an attempt to photograph the beings, but was unable to find his camera. Sg. William Alcione Alves de Silva caught a glimpse of the apparition, as stated in the report.

The report goes on to say: "What we saw appeared to place or remove something from the ground, as scientists might do. They appeared to control our thoughts, rendering our bodies tired and unable to think strategically and tactically. We found ourselves in as situation of being unable to define what was real, what was a dream, or what was a nightmare, and all of us felt and saw the same thing. Following this experience, we had headaches, anxiety, and were unable to stop talking and remarking about what we had seen. We were very thirsty. What seemed to have lasted 40 minutes had covered, in fact, 2 or 3 hours. The commander closes his report by saying: "Several people have spoken about experiences identical to those of us soldiers, and we are going to interview these people. Some speak of feeling hot air upon entering their home. Vehicles were experiencing electrical problems. The Mitsubishi does not start; the soldiers who had the closest contact seem anguished, all of us feel psychologically or physically different, more tired, sleepy, there are stories of people who feel themselves levitating. I will conduct my own study on this incident. Corporal Rabelo spoke about and presented photographs that he managed to take during his sightings, using his camera. He prepared an official report on the initial event, which is on file in this Military Police Division."

Some people would call these beings extraterrestrials, because they were linked to UFO sightings, and because they behaved as visiting ETs would do: gathering soil samples (this is a recurrent feature in 'alien' sightings). But we are actually dealing with a totally different phenomenon that is accompanied by several different characteristics that show up in so many other encounters with dimensional beings. The strange beings were luminous, they didn't walk, but glided. There is a lack of details in their bodily features. They controlled the body and mind of the police officers. The officers found themselves in a strange mental state, similar to trance, and they had physical aftereffects.

If you are not familiar with the phenomenon, one might think that an encounter or sighting of a cryptic entity, a UFO or alien is merely a visual observation, but there are so many more things that can go on and are typical for such events. By itself, an individual event can look insignificant, unimportant, puzzling, incomprehensible. But overall they share features that appear and again. Paying attention to those details helps us to understand what really is going on.

The problem with so many fortran researchers is that they take a lot of these intruding entities for real physical beings, animals and humanoids alike. But when you look at all the different sorts and kinds of creatures that make their appearances, then this planet must be a host of an enormous variety of biological weird beings, who all need to eat, have families, and need a lot of territory to roam around on a daily basis foraging for food. They are seen in the air, swamps, lakes, river, mountains, cities, cemeteries, and along our roads. They also like to visit our homes and bedrooms. There are way, way too much sightings for them to be physical beings. Not to mention that a lot of them behave in absurd ways.

Their weirdness is the basic characteristic of these beings. They are out of place and behave in mysterious ways. They definitely come from somewhere else, that is, from another dimension.

7.2. Intelligent Control

The intelligence among the dimensional beings that intrude our reality varies greatly. Some are very primitive and appear solely to cause fear, some want to attract attention Others are much more intelligent and have definitive plans to carry out, and are very sophisticated in creating complicated events to bedazzle professional researchers.

UFOs which are basically energetic light spheres from our perspective, are definitely under intelligent control by the beings who guide them, and transform them according to their wishes. The physics of space and time are quite different in the dimensional, or astral, world. When they appear in our world, originally as light energy and then as more solidified ships and beings, they both display an intelligence behind it. They also move in ways different than what is normal in our physical world, because, after all, they are not physical objects or biological beings.

The beings behind the UFOs show high intelligence. The UFO vehicles meticulously follow people, follow cars, circle around airplanes, and avoid interception. They can take action and take out airplanes when they are fired upon. They can take out rockets and rockets installations. They can manipulate our minds directly. They are very aware of what is going on around them, and can react before we humans can even decide what to do.

7.3. Light

The Light Spectrum

1929, Lackawack, NY: Nothing can follow little Jill's story, but this is close. A man was walking the mile or so from his friend's house on a dirt road running through the woods. There was an unusual Silence to everything, an uncanniness which made the woods seem to be closing in around him. There was a weird light off the road, pulsing on the ground among the trees. Too curious to just walk on, he carefully left the road and negotiated the tangle of plants between him and the light. On the ground was a dome of light four feet in diameter and a foot and a half high. It was yellow-green. He wondered if it could be some weird fungus effect, and went closer, reaching below the illumination to feel the ground. Nothing unusual. The dome suddenly brightened greatly, scaring him into cover. Within the area of the dome, two beings slowly materialized. They were one foot high. They stepped out, looking like "classic" Little People of the folktales. They stared in his direction, unnerved him and he stumbled backwards with a crash. Quickly the Little Folk jumped back into the glow-dome and everything vanished. The witness was left trying to relax and collect himself. Upon examining the spot the next day, nothing was disturbed at the spot of the glow. (Ron Quinn in Little People)

Encounters like the above still happen today, but now the witness would tell us that saw a UFO and two aliens came out. Our interpretation of what we see does not really matter. We have to look at what is really there: two beings emerging from a light source. That light source often goes through many changes and point to a phenomenon that slides through the electromagnetic spectrum.

When the dimensional beings enter our world, they appear to us as energy units that can slide up and down the frequency spectrum. When they pass through the visible light spectrum they become visible to us.

What we observe as light does not come from what we know about ordinary light sources. It is an intense energy mass, throwing off visible light. Maybe we could call it a plasma.

Just to give you an idea that a plasma sphere can be used by an intelligence, the pentagon is working on a laser that creates a plasma ball at the intended location and modulate its energies to create various effects from the plasma ball. It could create sound (giving commands), but it can also deter, stun, and probably also kill a person. At this moment (2019) the plasma ball can pass through glass into a building but not yet penetrate other solid barriers.

There are plenty of stories of people who have seen a plasma or light sphere enter and leave their house, passing effortlessly through walls. I am not saying that UFO or light sphere are plasma balls, but it is certainly an option to explore.

These glowing UFO objects frequently change color, size, and form, and this fact indicates that they are comprised of energy which can be manipulated. When desired they can further arrange this energy to create forms that look physical, such as spaceships and beings, and even create a semi-physical matter to give them substance.

There is a lot to say that they come down from high electromagnetic frequencies, such as gamma rays and then move down into the x-rays and ultraviolet before entering and operating in the visible light. There is also evidence that they they throw off infrared frequencies.

It seems that once they stabilize in our world, they become of a white color, which they use for travel, but radical maneuvers of ascent or descent require it to alter its frequencies again, and this process produces new color changes.

They can also produce flashing colored light all around their rim, or up and under the light sphere or spaceship. There are saucers that have pulsating lights, that dim and brighten. Some UFOs have halos around them. Other give off explosive showers of colored sparks.

Aside from necessary light changes, they seemingly can produce any light effect they want.

A light orb or even a light flash can transform into an apparent physical humanoid being. It is a process of transforming an energy substance into a visible form.

The Light Flash

Roy Green has been truck driving for some fifteen years. During this period he witnessed numerous accidents, fires, police chases, etc, along the busy interstates. But this day would be like no other. While traveling one spring afternoon between Bend and Burns, Oregon on State 20, a white Caddy shot by in the passing lane doing over seventy five. Then slowed, pulling back into the right lane several hundred feet in front of him. Moments later a bright flash of light filled his cab. It only lasted a second or two before things returned to normal. But, the car had vanished. Roy pulled to the side and stopped. Several cars approaching from the opposite direction did the same. One driver leaped out shouting, "Damn, did you see that?" Another claimed the flash appeared directly over the Caddy. No sign of the vehicle could be found, not even skid marks. It was like the Caddy never even existed. (Ron Quinn in Mysterious Disappearances)

Bright light flashes are often associated with strange events, especially light spheres and entities appearing and disappearing in flash of light. UFOs can take on the form of cars. They like to follow a driver, especially at night, and then mysteriously disappear. Or, like in the story above, they pass the driver and disappear in a flash.

A bright light flash can simply mark the entry or exit of a dimensional vehicle, but other light flashes have a different purpose.

In many UFO contacts an entity holding some kind of wand shines a light beam directly at the witness. Aboard a flying saucer, a light flashes and the abductee or contactee is told 'his picture has just been taken'. A light flash can also appear out of point in space in front of the witness, or first the flash is seen, and then the entity appears.

In some of these cases the witness will be paralyzed (actually unable to move) after being hit by the light flash.

A person can also see a bright light flash, or be engulfed by it, without any further events happening. These are usually seen by people who are psychic, and they possibly have had encounters with UFOs or mysterious beings before.

The light flash can be used to induce a trance state, so prevalent in all these encounters. The body is 'paralyzed', but the entranced mind can then be manipulated by the dimensional beings, who can make the witness see and experience events that go from a simple entity sighting to elaborate experiences such as alien abductions. So much have been researched and talked about in regard to these abductions, what has been seen and experienced on the spaceships, and all the contacts with the hybrid children, that we have forgotten that is all induced mental experiences.

By the way it is never good to shine a flashlight or laser light to a UFO or light orbs. They don't like it at all. Maybe it disrupts the energy of their vehicle or light-form. They usually hit back with a beam of light of their own:

..."I raised my arm and shined my flashlight at it, and in an instant I saw a bright flash of light. It knocked me down, and I felt like I'd had an electrical shock. Then I passed out." He regained consciousness the next morning and several hours later began to feel a lot of pain. "My right arm was completely numb, my kidneys, my spine, my right side all hurt very, very much. I thought I was going to die. I had no appetite for eight days. I didn't want to eat anything. I had to use a cane because I couldn't stand on my right leg, and I couldn't hold anything in my right hand because it would fall out of my hand." (UFO Danger Zone by Bob Pratt)

Beams of Light

The [black] aircraft was no more than twenty feet off the ground and, as it moved slightly toward him, a recurring pattern of tiny multicolored lights danced their way across the snow. The lights were obviously coming from the aircraft, but Tom couldn't make out how they were being projected onto the snow. The total silence and barely perceptible movement of the object convinced Tom that there was no way he would have seen it if it hadn't been so plainly silhouetted against the white snow. Its jet-black color and the noiseless slow motion combined to give him the impression that it was defying gravity. Tom crouched in the snow to avoid being seen. It was moving slowly along the ridge and seemed to be quartering the ground as if looking for something. Its tiny "disco" lights traced their silent pattern in the snow as the object slowly turned at the end of the ridge and then resumed its journey over the snow, searching for God knows what. It was a slow, methodical search, but for what? (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

Beams of light coming from UFOs are common, and are of unusual light characteristics. They illuminate everything inside the beam, but they do not cast any light or cause reflection in the area outside the beam.

One peculiar thing about these beams is that they seem to go out from the object and extend to different lengths, not fading into the darkness but terminating suddenly like poles or rods of light. It is as if the light beam has been cut off flat.

It is not unusual to see these beams move around as if they are looking for something, but this might be another diversion tactic too. This was already the case with the mysterious late 1800s airships.

At the other side, it might be possible that the entities are indeed searching for something on the ground, as their light beams seem to methodically scanning a certain area.

Light beams can also penetrate houses and light up everything inside.

A light beam can also be used by a UFO occupant to go up into or down from the craft.

In Brazil there have been cases in which a light orb shone a light beam on a victim with severe physical effects. Feelings of hot and cold at the same time, paralysis of the affected part or the entire body, numbness of the part or even the entire body, electric shocks, even unconsciousness. This light beam was pulling the victims up into the air, sometimes this was accompanied with a whirling wind.

Some of the people were able to hold on to a pole or a tree and prevent the 'sucking up'. Strangely, there is a case where a woman was lifted up by a light beam, resulting in numbness of her body and heat/cold sensation, but her daughter didn't have any sensation at all nor was lifted up when she grabbed her mother's arm in an effort to hold her back. In all these cases the people were lifted up to a certain height and then gently lowered or just dropped hard.

The following is just one of many cases gathered by the Brazilian military. Bob Pratt had a record of these released Brazilian Air Force investigation. You can now view them on Web Archive.

Santo Antônio do Tauá – Manoel do Espirito Santo, 20, high school student , resident of Santo Antônio do Tauá (town) – Was in front of his house with some friends, Júlio, Paulo, Deca and Carlito) when he saw a yellow light moving E/W, slowing in speed and stopping about 20 meters from the group. He said he could see two crew members inside who appeared to be human, one man and a woman; the "man" was on the left side and the woman on the right side of the "apparatus"; both wore glasses (different shape) and communication gear (earphones)...the one on the left (?)... more attentively to the group of people. At the same time the other, behind a horizontal tube (?) ...directed a ray of red light toward the group; having been hit directly, it felt like an electric shock, from the feet to the head; then felt paralyzed (arms and legs immobilized) and semi-conscious. The object gradually began to move away, gaining altitude and speed. Manoel was able to move again, feeling numb for some minutes.

Glowing Eyes

Glowing eyes is always a sign of a dimensional entity. It seems that they serve to fix your attention and to bring you in a hypnotic trance. They are actually not eyes as we understand them, but to intense light sources.

Seen and Unseen

UFOs can move around in our world unseen when they are not in the visible light spectrum. Trevor James, an engineer who became interested in UFOs discovered that these invisible UFOs would show up on film of cameras with infrared lenses. Equally, other people have found that cameras that allow ultraviolet light to be captured would also show aerial objects not visible at the time the picture was taken. Video cameras have captures the movement of these objects too in both these frequency ranges.

There are sightings of UFOs in which one person can see the UFO or flying saucer, and other people in the same location do not see it, or their camera does not pick up the object.

I saw an oddly still white orb above cornfield by my house took several pictures and it wouldn't show up. I was looking at it with my eyes but when I look through my phone it's not there. I am now confused looking at my phone and being able to see it but it wasn't anywhere. (Reddit)

The reason for this is that some people are very psychic and are more sensitive to infrared and ultraviolet frequencies. It is also possible that some people are sensitive to natural magnetic fields in certain location augmenting their perception to frequencies beyond the visible spectrum.

It is also possible that the visual sighting is an induced mental experience specifically aimed at one person. The object or entity is not really visible to normal people but the targeted person will will experience the sighting as real. With induced mental experience there is often also a distortion of the time elapsed.

However, when a UFO or entity appears with a luminous glow around them, then this is a sign that it is going through frequency changes, and thus its is real and not an induced hallucination. Luminous glows are always a real phenomenon of something appearing in our world from another dimension.

Sensitivity to Our Light Sources

UFOs are a kind of plasma vehicles for the dimensional beings in the higher frequencies of the electromagnetic spectrum, part of which is the visible light spectrum. Because of this, any intense light beam directed to them will disrupt their own structure of the light sphere. When people shines a powerful flashlight or laser light directly at a UFO, it will immediately move away, or sometimes retaliate with a light beam of their own.

Probably any beam of concentrated electromagnetic frequency, from the infrared to gamma rays, has a disrupting effect on their manifestation in this world. This is worth investigating and it might be a deterrent to their presence.

7.4. Sounds

A few years ago, my boyfriend worked in a warehouse that was out in the middle of nowhere. In between railroad tracks and the river. On one side of the warehouse, there was DENSE forest. He had gotten done at work around 8pm, right as the sun was setting. He was sitting outside waiting for his ride and talking to me on the phone. The conversation was normal until I heard his tone change. My boyfriend isn't one to show his emotions, at all, but I could instantly tell something was wrong. I asked what was going on and he explained that he thought he heard a baby crying from inside the woods. Now, I probably would've second guessed and thought he was joking around because that's his personality, but the way he was talking, I could tell he was serious. The cries went on for a while and he said that they eventually turned into wails, and it didn't sound like it was too far away. He disconnected our call (much to my dismay) and sent me an audio recording of what he was hearing. Sure as shit, there were sounds of a baby crying. He told me he was tempted to go into the woods and try to find the source of the sound, and I begged him not to. Something about it didn't feel right. Thankfully, his ride came to get him before he could step into the forest. I've heard these kinds of stories before and many say that it's something or someone in the forest trying to lure people in with the sounds of a baby crying. But, I just can't wrap my head around it. It honestly still gives me chills when I think about it to this day. Even my boyfriend doesn't talk about it much because I think it genuinely freaked him out. (Reddit)

The sounds that accompany the manifestation of dimensional beings in our world are really intriguing. UFOs create many different sounds, of which there are a few recordings. They can buzz, pulse, hum, and create extreme low frequencies and high pitched shrieking sounds. It is possible that the low frequency humming is used to induce a trance.

Creatures are known to create very unusual sounds, such as growling and shrieking. But are the creatures themselves creating these sounds? After all they are only forms of energy, not actual biological beings with vocal cords. The sounds are usual heard in the area where the creatures have been seen, or seen soon afterwards. Where does the sound actually come from?

The most common sounds heard in these cases are described as sounding like a baby crying or a woman screaming. Sometimes it is a voice calling the person's name, as if to beckon him further into the woods.

John Keel assumed that these sounds are actually caused by an abrupt temperature change when the dimensionals enter or leave our dimension. That is an interesting supposition because abrupt temperature changes are well know in haunted houses, but also in UFO cases.

Metallic Sounds

...Just as we were turned around, we all heard a strange sound that almost sounded like quieted thunder/metal hitting metal that was coming from what sounded like off in the distance. As we whipped around to see what made the noise, a large white bird that I think was a white owl flew over our heads silently, flapping its wings and disappearing behind a tree that was a good 25 feet behind us.

We all looked at each other trying to make sense of what the hell we just heard and started walking briskly back towards civilization. We heard what sounded like twigs snapping in the woods behind us, and my girlfriend and I turned around to see what made the noise.

Peeking from behind the tree the owl just flew behind, was what looked like an impossibly tall ghost white humanoid shape, with one hand on the tree trunk as it peered out from behind it. Before we could get a good look at it's face, it quickly retreated back to behind the tree out of our sight again... (Phantom and monsters)

Metallic sounds heard in the middle of woods are often associated with strange beings, feelings of dread and of being watched. Shrieking sounds can also be heard.

In the experience above, we find a metallic sound and an owl. Owls, sometimes unusually large, often appears with abduction experiences and Grays. The tall ghostly figure that peeks from behind a tree is also a typical encounter in the woods.

People who are bothered by dimensional entities, through a UFO sightings or an entity encounter, can receive strange phone calls from strangers. This can be warnings not to talk about the event, but sometimes there is only a metallic voice at the other end, speaking in an incomprehensible language. Or there are only metallic sounds coming through the telephone line.

Metallic sounds can also happen with poltergeist phenomena.

But metallic sounds can come out of nowhere too.

When I was in high school, I was home alone one day and I heard an incredible loud metallic shriek sound from the bathroom. It also alarmed me, and I was glued to my chair. But once I worked up the nerve to check it, there was nothing, and the sound was never heard again. (Gost Theory)

With Electronic Voice Phenomena, or EVP, when sounds are recorded in haunted houses, voices captured can also have a metallic sound to it.

It is difficult to say where metallic sounds come from. They seem to be generated by energetic phenomena and linked to other-dimensional events, whether or not there are beings behind it. There are usually heard from a distance, and so the source remains unknown although they are associated with the sightings of beings or UFOs, and other phenomena.

The sound of metal banging on metal sometimes goes together with the sighting of a light sphere.

The following, rather lengthy, account is interesting because the people involved were right in front of the source of the metallic sound. It offers us a glimpse into its possible other-dimensional source.

Let me start this off with some background information about myself before I share my encounter. I am a 24f that has spent a majority of my life outdoors camping and hiking through wild terrain. I have also been studying zoology and biology for the last 6 years and have been in close proximity to bobcats mid hunt, protective momma bears, and territorial elk. I'm disclosing this because all of these experiences have been quite scary, but I have never been more terrified than I was the night I encountered an unknown entity in northern AZ.

In March of 2018 I decided to go on a back-road drive with a friend of mine at about 2 am. That area is well-known for the almost zero light pollution which makes the night sky mesmerizing on a clear night, which that night was. The area I was driving in was thick pine forest, and I was on alert because of the large elk in the region. After about an hour my friend and I made it to a paved road leading back towards home. The road was a T-shape, and we were stopped at a stop sign, taking a moment to update our playlist. I'm about to shift out of park when I look about 30ft in front of me, I'm facing the pine treeline that my headlights are illuminating. The treeline sat along a small 5 ft ridge that was parallel to the road I was going to turn onto. I noticed a door sized block of my view that appeared to be warped. It looked like I was underwater and looking up at the surface, the image was just distorted and constantly shifting within the frame. Very odd.

I sat there for a while before I told my friend that I thought I was hallucinating. To clarify, I was not under the influence of any substance and hadn't been in almost a year at that point. I was concerned and was about to suggest they drive instead since my vision seemed to be impaired. That is until they told me that I wasn't hallucinating, they were witnessing the same thing. Without looking away from the block we both described the exact same image so at this point I'm a bit freaked out. We're pretty logical people and didn't want to jump to any conclusions, there must be a rational answer. So of course we do what sane people do on a dark back-road, we put my car in park and get out of the vehicle (I know, not smart)

We kept my headlights on as we crossed the road heading towards the distorted block and noticed that as we moved the "portal" wasn't moving from its original spot, so it ruled out any kind of fumes possibly interfering. As I reached the ridge that the 'portal' sat on top of my friend stopped. He said that it didn't feel right and that he thought we should go back to the car (he's smarter than me). At that point I was more intrigued than scared, and I was already within 10 ft of the thing so might as well finish the job. I started walking up the 5 ft incline when I was filled with the most intense dread that I had ever experienced. I could almost reach out and touch the warped doorway when my foot softly planted itself directly in front of it. At that exact moment the most horrendous noise erupted. It sounded almost as if someone had dropped a metal tank out of the air, it was the loudest metallic crash that I had ever heard. I was startled by the noise and lost my footing and slipped down the ridge and caught my footing right as I was next to my friend. We both looked at each other in scared confusion when the night air filled with what sounded like 3 dozen coyotes calling. I'll admit, it's pretty common for coyotes to call out in groups (they're kind of known for it) but what's unusual about this specific situation was that the 3 dozen coyote howls sounded like they were screeching in our ears. It was so loud that we had to cover our ears as we ran to my car. I felt like I was about to be attacked by all of them, and they were about to jump on me by how close their screams were. As I was running back across the street I was looking around desperately for the coyotes to determine how many there was but not a single one was in sight. As soon as we slammed and locked the doors of the car the noise that was almost debilitating the moment before completely went silent. Nothing. Not a single peep. Looked up as I was shifting into drive and saw that the warped portal was now gone, confirmed with my friend that he no longer saw it too and drove the hell out of there. We got home in record time and ran inside my home and discussed what happened until the sun came up.

We both encountered the exact same phenomenon out there on that road. We both saw the warped apparition and heard the same noises. We were both filled with a nauseating dread and were hysterical in what we had experienced.

We couldn't solve it logically and were desperate for answers the next day when we started speaking with some friends who grew up in the local Navajo reservation. When we shared the experience they we all convinced that we had encountered a skinwalker. When I first heard the term I was sure that they were kidding but they truly believe in this, they grew up with the warnings from their elders so the fear they have for this thing is real. Some would even walk with blessed ash on their foreheads to discourage skinwalker encounters, a sort of protection charm. I was told that a skinwalkers scream is similar to crashing metal and that the coyote noises was the skinwalker trying to disorient us. So I looked into other skinwalker encounters and it's a real inconsistent mess of stories out here, but I have come across a few that are similar to my own experience. The main issue that I have with this explanation is that I never saw a humanoid, just a transparent doorway. (Reddit)

What is really interesting about this account is that what looked like a portal to the two people was interpreted by the Navajos as a being they call Skinwalker. The shimmering appearance of the 'portal' reminds me of other experiences of what I have termed Translucent Humanoid Beings (see my article of Translucent Humanoids Beings). They have a similar shimmering wave distortion. Most of these translucent beings are of the skinny praying mantis type. It seem that it is some type of cloaking method that allows them to be in our physical world, but they can create a kind of energetic blanket that bends the natural light around them. It is not totally perfect, and that is why we can see the shimmering effect if one pays close attention. It could also be that they shift to a state half in this world, half in the other world, what would make them quasi invisible with only an energetic shimmering that can still be noticed. The metallic noise is most likely an energetic burst, while the coyote noises are intentionally generated into the minds of the witnesses.

A side note: There seems to be confusion about what a Skinwalker means. It is a term is used for a variety of monsters, and not only the historical bad-witch shapeshifter.

Beeps

UFOs and entity encounters can also create code-like beeps that blast out of car radios, telephones, and TV sets. Loud beeping noises can be heard both outside as inside one's house.

The strange beeps and metallic noises in telephones could be explained as some kind of electromagnetic interference the dimensional appearance creates, but sometimes it is a voice repeating numbers. Quite bizarre, but maybe that is the point. Repeating numbers can also be heard when people wake up at night.

One or more beeps might also be used by the dimensionals to induce a trance. Some witnesses first hear a beep and go into a trance, and when they hear another beep they come out of the trance. Maybe it is conditioning such as a post-hypnotic suggestion. What happens between the two beeps cannot be remembered.

7.5. Smells

My dog took off right up the ridge and up on top of the hill,' Edgar Harrison said, recalling how he and a group of I reporters pursued a tall, hairy humanoid. 'They took off after the thing when they heard it. Boy, you should have had a recording of those men when they hit the smell. I was with them, and it stank so bad you would have thought you were walking in horse manure. It was that strong. The dog went three hundred feet up there, then he came hack with his tail between his legs. He laid right down in back of the house and just got sick as can be. His eyes got bloodshot and he lay there for over an hour throwing up. I can't get him to go near that MI anymore.' (John Keel in The Cosmic Question)

Strange smells often accompany strange events. The descriptions vary, but the smell is generally associated with sulfur, rotten eggs, a stench of marsh gas, or rotten garbage. It can be very strong to the point where it makes people and dogs ill. Historically, it is mostly associated with devil(s), demons, monsters and bad spirits in general. It also appears with UFO and monster sightings.

Sasquatch, or Bigfoot, is often accompanied by such a strong sulfurous smell. it is said to be given off by the creature itself. But this might not be the case.

It seems that the smell is a byproduct from the manifestation of the dimensionals into our world. This manifestation, or intrusion, always throws off strong electromagnetic radiation, and this EM radiation could create chemical processes in the air masses of our atmosphere.

For a sulfurous gas to be smelled (and be strong) in an entire area of a sighting, and for it to linger around sometimes for quite a while, require a very large quantity of this gas to be produced from the surrounding air. So the radiation thrown off by the dimensional event must be quite strong, and in some cases long lasting.

John Keel brought forward the idea that what is being produced from the air by the radiation is hydrogen sulfide,  $H_2S$ . It has the characteristic foul odor of rotten eggs. It is also very poisonous, corrosive, and flammable. Exposure to hydrogen sulfide can result in eye irritation, a sore throat and cough, nausea, shortness of breath, symptoms sometimes reported in such encounters.

The smell is sometimes associated with a musk smell:

Later the Canadian investigator told me that he too had suddenly become aware of being watched. He could not explain it. He had also smelled the strong musk odor. Tom, who was a lifelong hunter and was familiar with the scent of all wildlife in the area, swore the smell was associated with the "phenomenon," whatever it was. That smell came back to haunt us repeatedly throughout our research program on that ranch, appearing suddenly without warning, sometimes in a highly localized way, sometimes right inside our command and control center. Whatever it was, its invisibility sure gave it an advantage over us. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

7.6. Leaving Behind of Evidence

I have already mentioned the anchors left behind by the airships, as 'proof' that these ships and their occupants are supposed to be real. UFOs and flying saucers have been dropping metal pieces for a long time. Collected as valuable proof, they then turn out to be common metals.

Saucers land and leave behind impressions, burned soil and scorched vegetation. It is all a ploy to make us believe that they are physical beings in physical ships, so we would never probe into their etheric existence.

It is useless to pay analyze the metals or to measure the marks they leave behind.

Nevertheless a short note about the tracks they leave behind: human feet, animal-looking paw prints, or hoof marks. When in mud or in snow, it can clearly be seen that they appear suddenly, go on for a few feet to many yards, and suddenly stop. Yes, they left tracks thus they must be physical, that is, they had some weight to their apparent physicality, but they appeared out of nowhere and disappeared into thin air. Tracks can lead to a window of a house and just stop there under the window. No tracks or signs that the being returned from where it came. It is like a calling card: "Look I have been here and I have been peering through your bedroom window."

With mystery entities often leave animal-like tree-toe tracks, sasquatch included, but there no point in trying to identify them, as they never match up with any known species. It just fixes your attention to something that is totally unimportant.

7.7. Paranormal Effects

When dimensional beings take an interest in a person, be it temporary or permanent, that person's life is often accompanied by paranormal manifestations.

In Ufology, contactees tend to be psychic in the first place, and things like materializations and dematerializations of their household objects is not unusual, as are other phenomena often associated with poltergeist.

The life-long contactees often have a long history of entities appearing in or outside the house since childhood. Telepathic messages from 'aliens' are quite common. Contactees also have induced mental experiences. They can develop the ability of automatic writing and speaking in 'alien' languages. These are abilities well-known in spiritualism circles.

7.8. Non-Solid Appearances

When they crested a rise, the family all saw a huge craft hovering above the valley. Munde's recollection was that the craft was shaped somewhat like the Tacoma dome; it had a flat bottom and it stretched from Dulce Lake all the way across to Archuleta Mesa. Munde declared that the object was probably five miles across. He described a single horizontal row of windows that spanned the middle of the giant craft as it hovered peacefully over the valley. He also said that he could vaguely make out the landscape behind the object, making it slightly transparent. Yet he could also easily see the boundaries of the giant object. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

UFOs have been seen flying straight into rock faces, into the ground, into water without a splash. This shows clearly that they are not in a solid state of matter. They are visible to the eye, but they are of a different composition that allows them to pass through solid matter.

There are also reports of cryptic animals, bigfoot especially that have been seen in transparent form.

The non-solidity of cryptic creatures also shows when they have been shot. There are several reports of bigfoot and other strange creatures being shot, and they behaved as if nothing happened. Sometimes they just jerk a little bit and run away, or they just disappear on the spot into thin air. Never a blood trail. Visible yes, but biological no.

"Get my Magnum," Tom barked as he aimed more kicks at the wolf's ribs. Even as the sickening thud of Tom's heavy boots rained into the animal's abdomen, the beast seemed unconcerned. Tad ran to the flatbed, retrieved a powerful handgun, and quickly delivered it to his father. Gorman took aim and squeezed the trigger. The shot rang across the field and slammed into the wolf's ribs. The slug from the .357 had no effect whatsoever on the attacking animal. It didn't yelp, didn't pause, and didn't bleed. Quickly, Tom pumped two more shots into the wolf's upper abdomen. On the third shot, the wolf slowly and reluctantly released the bleating calf.

..."Get the thirty aught six," Tom said through clenched teeth, never taking his eyes off the huge beast. Tad ran to the homestead and returned in seconds bearing the heavy firearm. Tom had killed dozens of elk from over two hundred yards with this weapon. As he took aim at the wolf a mere forty feet away, he momentarily felt pity for the beast. The thunderous shot rang out. The sound of the bullet hitting flesh and bone near the shoulder was unmistakable. The wolf recoiled but stood calmly looking at Tom. His mouth went dry. He felt a cold sweat running down his back. Ellen began to cry. Ed began to curse softly under his breath, shaking his head in disbelief. The wolf should be a silent, bleeding pile of dead flesh. Instead, it had recoiled, backed off maybe ten feet, but still seemed perfectly healthy.

Tom took a deep breath and raised the weapon again, aiming for the huge chest cavity. The bullet ripped through the animal, and a sizable chunk of flesh detached from the exit wound and lay on the grass. Still the wolf made no sound. Then, with a last unhurried look at the stunned family, the wolf turned slowly and began to trot away across the grass. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

7.9. Magnetic Effects

Tom reached through the window of his truck and grabbed his compass. He had learned a long time ago that strange events caused the compasses to act strangely. The frightened cow had now backed thirty yards away and suddenly turned tail and stampeded toward the eastern end of the pasture. Tom then watched as the herd of cows suddenly split in two in Red Sea fashion, as if something invisible was now in the middle of the herd of cattle. Dozens of animals ran west, while the remainder stampeded east. Tom glanced briefly at his compass and saw that the needle was pointed to the invisible something in their midst. Whatever was dispersing the cows was invisible even in the noon sun, yet it was exuding a powerful magnetic field that was detectable on Tom's compass. Tom and Ellen could follow the mysterious, invisible object as it made its way through the herd of animals, as the panicky animals were constantly stampeding away from it. Whatever it was, it was heading south, as did the needle of Tom's compass. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

It is not always the case, but the appearance of UFOs or entities can display a strong magnetic field in the immediate environment. Iron or steel objects can be strongly magnetized for a short time afterwards.

Based on some investigated cases, it is believed the magnetic field around UFOs can be quite strong.

8.1. Being Made to Believe

We don't know. There is no question that something happens. It seems as if an external force takes control of people. In the close encounters people may lose their ability to move or to speak; in the abduction cases, which are the most extreme example, they gradually enter into a series of experiences during which they lose control of all their senses. Do they experience what they think they experience? Suppose you, an outside observer, had been there. What would you have seen?

What we do know is that you can make people hallucinate using either lights or microwave or electromagnetic energy. You can also make them pass out; you can cause them to behave strangely, put them into shock, make them hear voices or even kill them. (Jacques Vallée)

We cannot shield our minds or brains from external influences. Governments now have the abilities to directly influence a person with electromagnetic weapons, to alter their perceptions, and to make them experience, with all their senses, something that is not real, or to change their behavior and even their belief systems.

The dimensional beings have been around for millions if not billions of years and some of them are very apt in using electromagnetic energy to manipulate humans in many ways, and even their environment. The manifestation of these beings in our world is always one of intense energies. The dimensionals modulate this energy to obtain the desired effects.

We, humans, are still debating if spirits, or aliens, really exist...

The stories of contactees show that they are clearly put under a hypnotic trance with induced mental experiences to make them believe they were abducted, visited planets etc. to cover up what the dimensionals were really doing to them. The beings are clearly manipulating the mind of these people but for what purpose? The contactee's memory of what really happens is wiped. We can assume that they are programmed with post-hypnotic suggestions. By doing this the dimensional beings are able to manipulate somebody's mind set, and also his decisions and actions in his every day life. Contactees are people who are highly sensitive, psychic, and thus also very easy to hypnotize and influence. They are the most at risk for such external manipulation. They can even be made to experience mystical events and a (false) illumination or enlightenment.

For all these reason, the memory of the contactees are not reliable, and do not give us what really happens during such contacts, nor is their information reliable. The remembered non-events are therefore of little or no importance.

Descriptions of craft and beings is just data added to more data. Descriptions of events, such as 'alien abductions', makes you look into the wrong direction, and you fail to see what is really happening. The dimensional beings are experts in deceiving and hiding their true intentions.

There is actually little difference between the old devils and demons and the modern-day aliens. Aliens abduct, torture ('physical examination' and 'probes' without anesthesia), and keep coming back to their bedrooms to scare their paralyzed victims. They are fed information, prophecies, nonsense and rumors to be believed in unconditionally. They are told to spread their revelations and become ambassadors of space people. Spirits and aliens alike have convinced their human contacts of their honesty, reliability, the accuracy of their predictions, and their well-meant intentions. Then they leave them sitting on a hilltop waiting for the world to blow up, or the spaceships to take them away.

8.2. Creating a Frame of Reference

The phenomenon is dependent on belief, and as more and more people believe in flying saucers from other planets, the lower force can manipulate more people through false illumination. I have been watching, with great consternation, the worldwide spread of the UFO belief and its accompanying disease. If it continues unchecked we may face a time when universal acceptance of the fictitious space people will lead us to a modern faith in extraterrestrials that will enable them to interfere very overtly in our affairs, just as the ancient gods dwelling on mountaintops directly ruled large segments of the population in the Orient, Greece, Rome, Africa, and South America. (John Keel)

Dimensional beings can assume any form they want, although some of them might keep a habitual form they have used for over centuries. When they intrude in our world, they have to use a form, a behavior, or information that can be easily comprehended by humans. So they appear in a way that create a frame of reference for to those to whom they appear, based on these witnesses' belief system. This is often religiously tinted. In the past appearing entities were interpreted as gods, angels or demons, or spirits of certain kinds. In a largely a-religious world, they appear as aliens and extraterrestrials, ambassadors from the Galactic Councils, or just plain swamp monsters.

It all depends if you are a religious person an agnostic, an esoteric, or a simple farmer. The dimensionals will adjust to your understanding. But they will also built upon this belief system to make humans believe what they want, often for misdirection. Demons and spirits were never to be trusted, angels also displayed manipulative behavior, and the aliens are not all that kind either.

Adopting their presence to our belief system has another side. The beings that appear to us are not always true beings. Some of them are like mere holograms with specific programs. They have a certain degree of consciousness, and can run around by themselves to scare people for example. Especially if you are tuned into them. On the internet, a man wrote that he was doing in-depth research in werewolf or wolf-man sightings. After a while he became psychically visited by those beings, what scared him so much that he had to abandon his research. These low consciousness creations can also feed the energy of such people to prolong their existence.

When angels and demons gave way to the industrial revolution, the dimensionals had to adapt to our new belief systems. The invention of zeppelins brought sightings of strange looking wooden and metal airships made by mysterious inventors. Then we had airplanes which brought us sightings of strange airplanes making incredible maneuvers. World War II brought a lot of new technology, and we sightings of mystery rockets. Mysterious large airplanes and helicopters appeared. With a growing interest in the possibility of extraterrestrial life and an already existing area of science fiction literature, flying saucers appeared. With the birth of genetic engineering, people started to get 'abducted' by aliens for the purpose of creating alien-human hybrids.

The belief system of extraterrestrial beings visiting the Earth has spread from the contactees to the general population to such a degree that now more than half of our society believes that it is quite possible that ETs are here, and hybrids are walking among us.

Some researchers think that the creation of belief systems is intentional from the part of the dimensional beings. I don't see why they would do this. Humans themselves already have a tendency to create beliefs about all kinds of ideas. It is an effort in trying to understand their environment and experiences. The only reason why dimensionals might do this is to create religions, which are always rich sources of outpourings of life energy by the devoted followers; and it is said that some dimensionals need this energy in order to prolong their own lives in the other dimension.

8.3. Providing Proof

Part of the initial mind manipulation is providing of 'proof'. They know that sightings alone are not enough. After a while, people do want some physical proof. To reinforce the belief system, they provide us with 'proof' by dropping various items.

Flying saucers have been dropping and dripping all kinds of metal pieces all over the landscape. These are often treasured by the ET-believers or contactees, but analysis always turns out disappointing, showing that the metal pieces have earthly compositions like calcium, zinc, magnesium, aluminum, chromium, silicon, tin.

A landing of a flying saucer would also provide unmistakable proof, isn't it? So the ufonauts provide us with landings. All those technological sophisticated vehicles have been landing, often to execute repairs, since the 1800's. Airships have landed for repairs, and many flying saucers have done the same. Aliens have been seen tinkering with their craft, and then suddenly fly away when discovered. Sometimes a UFO or flying saucer is seen crashing in the woods or in the desert, but we haven't seen any debris. Crash retrievals by the military is another belief system. It is quite possible that the military does retrieve some their own malfunctioning secret antigravity craft, and this would then be mistaken for a possible ET craft.

After more than a century of investigated UFO phenomena the public still does not have any solid evidence of physical extraterrestrials visiting us in physical space ships.

In the Historical Evolution chapter I talked about the late 1800s airships (and even in earlier centuries) dropping anchors, cutting their cord, and leaving the anchor behind. What can be more proof then that for the devote churchgoers to whom it happened that these wooden or technological airships must be real? And yet, they were not.

8.4. The Special Ones

History is full of people who 'have seen the light'. But have they seen the right kind of light? People who were contacted by angels, or religious figures, often find themselves special. They feel chosen. They know the truth. But all too often they are the victims of the play of the dimensionals.

Joan of Arc (1412-1431) claimed to have received visions of the archangel Michael, Saint Margaret, and Saint Catherine of Alexandria, instructing her to support the French king Charles VII and recover France from English domination, late in the Hundred Years' War. All went well for the French king, until she was captured at Compiègne by the Burgundian faction, a group of French nobles allied with the English. She was later handed over to the English and put on trial by the pro-English bishop Pierre Cauchon on a variety of charges. After Cauchon declared her guilty, she was burned at the stake on 30 May 1431, dying at about nineteen years of age. Why would angels and saint contact a teenage girl to start war after war, causing death and destruction, and then let her be captured and burned at the stake? Who was really speaking to her?

Children are often chosen by the dimensionals for apparitions of religious figures. Children are easily mind manipulated, and they don't have an understanding of what is going on nor any discrimination in the truth or falsehood of what they are experiencing.

It is not much different in the UFO contacts. Contactees often have had experiences with entities from their childhood. And the 'aliens' often tell the contactees that they are special, that they were chosen, that they have a special mission etc. In the end it is all to their own detriment.

8.5. Manipulation of Researchers

John Keel did not just collect reports and filed them in his cabinet. He actively engaged with and interviewed the witnesses and visited places of where strange events took place. Over the years he started to notice that the beings behind the phenomena were not only creating these events but would create them just for him, to make him believe in certain things.

This letter, and others like them, helped to convince me that my own investigations could be manipulated. I was being led to people and cases to support whatever theory I was working on at the time. I tested this by inventing some rather outlandish ideas. Within days I would receive phone calls, reports, and mail describing elements of those ideas. This was the feedback or reflective effect. Other investigators concerned with solving problems such as how flying saucers are propelled have automatically been fed, or led into, cases in which the witnesses supposedly viewed the interiors of the objects and saw things which confirmed the investigators' theories.

Someone somewhere was just trying to prove that they knew every move I was making, listened to all my phone calls, and could even control my mail!

It took me a long time to realize that many of my Men in Black reports were just feedback. (John Keel in The Mothman Prophecies)

It is quite possible that other researchers are also been manipulated by the dimensional beings without even knowing it. I strongly suspect that those researchers who use hypnosis to uncover 'hidden memories' are given stories that confirm their own preconceptions. After all, when their subjects are under hypnosis, or hypnotic trance, they are also subject to manipulation of the unseen entities. It has happened with more than one hypnotizer that when the patient was under hypnosis an alien came through and began to speak to the hypnotized person, answering questions of the hypnotizer.

8.6. Induced Mental Experiences

Typically, an abductee has no memory of a UFO experience. He or she may be concerned about periods of missing time, strange nightmares, or bouts with depression or anxiety. Having heard of UFO abductions, either from the media or from a friend or family member, the person begins to contemplate a UFO experience as the possible explanation for his or her problems. Eventually, the abductee finds his or her way to a therapist with an interest in UFOs. The therapist uses hypnosis and encourages the recovery of UFO abduction or contact memories. Once the person believes himself or herself to be an abductee, he or she often seeks contact with like-minded people by joining a support group, browsing chat rooms, and so on. This tightens abductees' connection to the subculture and will help convince them that the vague memories they have are real. (Believing That One Has Been Kidnapped by Extraterrestrials)

It doesn't sound good when you claim that a part of UFO and entity sightings, and the so-called 'alien abductions' are induced mental experiences. The term Induced mental experiences are experiences that are created in a person by an external influence. This now can be done by covert technology, but in the phenomenon of UFOs and weird entities, it is done intentionally by dimensional beings. They are masters of energy manipulation, and by creating certain frequencies in the electromagnetic spectrum, and modulation to match our own brain wave patterns, they can induce any mental experience in people who are susceptible to mental manipulation. These are mostly energy sensitive people or people with psychic abilities. They will see, hear and experience craft, aliens, entities of all kinds, and entire experiences such as abductions, planetary visits, and so on, solely in their minds. To them it is like a real physical experience. They actually do not know that the whole event is just a mental experience induced by dimensional beings. These people are not mentally ill, but are being used and manipulated. It is true that a lot of these people will develop mental instability because of the repeated contact and experiences. They believe that the experienced, often bizarre, experiences are real. They start to build a belief system that has no roots in reality. Most importantly, they lack the necessary education to understand what is going on, and they have a lack of discrimination between what is real and what is not, and what they are dealing with.

It is possible that some of the psychic people were taken to the astral realms of the dimensional beings, where they viewed the mind-constructed environments of the dimensionals. In the past people claimed to have visited the palaces of the gods and later on the enchanted realms of the fairies. Now they report being taken to underground caves, to cities at the bottom of the ocean, to spaceships and to strange civilizations on other planets. I certainly believe that this can be the case, but in most cases they were just projected mental experiences. It is much easier for the dimensionals to project scenes in the mind of a person, than to take him out of the body and transport him to their astral realm. The brain is so easily manipulated.

Induced mental experiences are also useful to make a person remember a certain scene, to cover up any memory of what really happened to him while he was in trance. In these cases, what a person remembers is not what happened. The memory of what really happened has been erased. Trying to recover these erased memories by hypnosis is also not realizable, because the mind is known to happily create and provide what the hypnotist expects or believes in. Also when the person is under hypnosis he is also under the influence of any entity hanging around.

Not all encounters are induced mental experiences of course. Many UFOs are caught on radar and seen by multiple people. There is also physical evidence of landings and of radiation effects.

What typically happens with those trance state and induced mental experiences, is that when the person comes out of it, they often cannot account for the passage of time. They think only a short time passed, while in reality many hours went by. The trance state seems to take their consciousness out of the experience of the passage of time. It is usually called missing time but it is actually the memory that is missing.

There are actually a lot of contacts with dimensionals that people just don't remember. They know something has happened but have no memory of it, or they remember just the beginning and the end of it. In some cases they do remember the mental experiences, but there are also plenty of cases where people go in and out of the trance and go on with their lives.

Induced mental experiences can be limited to hearing sounds only. Both in UFO cases and monster sightings witnesses can hear strange sounds before or after. In both type of cases a crying baby or a screaming woman is a typical sound heard in the woods. At least it sounds like a crying baby or a screaming woman. It can be the result of the physical manifestation of dimensional beings, creating these particular sound waves that resemble a crying baby or a screaming woman. These are often heard coming from the woods. But it might also be projected into the mind of people, to lure them into the woods, as they often do after hearing the sound. I have read so many accounts of sasquatch in which the witness was hearing it coming through the woods, with heavy stomping, branches breaking, and they even felt the earth trembling with every foot step, even all the way up to their tent, but in the morning no footprints were found at all. This suggests that sasquatch is able to project these sounds into the mind of the person. This is an induced auditory mental experience.

There are plenty of UFO contactees and abductees who hear the voices of 'aliens' giving them instructions or passing on information. Mental hospitals have patients who hear voices, and they don't know how to shut them of. Throughout history political people have been murdered by ordinary persons who heard voices and were instructed to kill.

8.7. Psychological Consequences

Watching a UFO can be quite exciting for some people. Others react fearful, probably because of an instinctual fear for the unknown. But there are some cases in which the witness of a UFO or an entity/monster is plagued by fears and anxiety for days or weeks afterward. It seems that in those cases, the dimensional beings have taken an interest in that person and psychically link up with him. A period of stalking can then follow. Entities hanging around, making themselves visible, or light spheres floating around. Paranormal activity can start up in the house, similar to poltergeist.

Contactees/abductees in particular are always affected by repeated visits, mostly in a negative way. For somebody who is not prepared for such contact, this can be a quite disrupting force in his life that he is not able to handle. This will have psychological consequences that will slowly destroy his life, and often his (love) relationships. Contactees/abductees become distrustful of other people, and especially of the government. Some border on paranoia. They are marked by fears, neurosis and breakdown. Insomnia and addictions are also known to occur.

All this is not surprising, because the phenomenon, in general, is based on inducing fear.

The exposure to frequent radiation from their presence might also be a contributing factor in ever increasing stress.

These entities love to drive us humans nuts by in many different ways and plays. A lot depends on how a person can handle the contact. The entities will often adjust their appearances and actions to what is inside the person. Fear attracts fear, gullibility will create false prophets, but genuine understanding can result in positive life-enriching effects. For that the contactees have to wade through the smokescreen of lies, false images and nonsensical behavior of the entities, and to be able to discriminate between mischievous beings and those who are genuinely benevolent.

Some people become psychic after their UFO contact(s). That might be a great opportunity for an expanded awareness, but it can also lead to delusions. Not everybody is able to handle this.

In short, we don't have to solely blame the entities themselves. We have to look inside ourselves, clean house and inform ourselves about the many aspects of the phenomenon.

8.8. The Induction of Fear

You will have understood by now that fear plays a large role in the manifestation of dimensional beings. You can find many examples of this throughout his text.

It is clear that the appearance of a lot of cryptic entities and monsters are intended to create a fear reaction into the witnesses. We are instinctively afraid of monsters and of the unknown. It is a survival instinct.

But fear can also be directly induced by manipulating our mind. We see that a lot with hikers in the woods. Some entities, especially the bigfoot kind, can instill tremendous fear in a person in order to drive that person away from a certain area. Light sphere and orbs can do the same. In the following example, a blue orb approached a rancher and his wife:

As Tom watched this amazing spectacle, the hair on the back of his neck rose. He could feel a wave of deep, naked fear washing over him. He felt paralyzed with the deepest, most visceral fear he had ever known. It was overwhelming. Wild animals had trapped Tom, he had been close to death, but he had never felt anything like the intensity of the terror he felt now. He knew Ellen was feeling the same because she had begun to hyperventilate. She gasped deeply and her body had begun to shake. Tom felt like he was going to have a seizure. Suddenly Ellen, who was whimpering with terror, turned on her flashlight. The effect was instantaneous. The blue orb darted abruptly into the branches of the nearby tree as if trying to avoid the flashlight's beam. It maneuvered effortlessly through the branches at high speed. It was obvious to them that the orb was under intelligent control. Then as abruptly as the object had darted into the trees, it suddenly shot out of sight behind their homestead. Ellen sank to her knees, weeping. Tom also felt weak. His legs could barely hold him. But the overwhelming, paralyzing terror he had felt had vanished. It was like a switch had been abruptly thrown. The aftereffects of that bolt of adrenaline were obvious. Perspiration poured from his body, and his legs and arms began shaking violently. He too sank to his knees and put his arms around his violently trembling wife. She continued weeping. He felt helpless to comfort her and could not manage a reassuring word. As his shaking subsided, he felt only numbness inside. He also felt relief. And puzzlement. How could that orb have provoked such abject terror in both of them? Tom knew that the fear he had felt was artificial. It had not been a normal response for him. He guessed that this bright blue orb had deliberately manipulated his emotions. How could this be? he wondered. Ellen buried her face in his chest, saying over and over, "We have to leave this place, we have to leave this place." (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

9.9. Fire

9.1. Explosions and Implosions

The dimensional beings come from a place or dimension with 'higher', more intense energy. When they appear into our dimension, or return to their dimension, then this can cause large energy explosions or implosions. We witness this with UFOs, but this can also happen in haunted houses, or poltergeist.

When a mass of energy suddenly appears in our world, then this has to displace a certain air volume. If the appearance is sudden, then the air volume has to instantaneously displace itself, resulting in an explosion. It is also possible that the surrounding air is suddenly subject to immense radiation resulting in a rapid heating and expansion too. Maybe other chemical and physical processes are going on too, causing tremendous sounds.

It is not unusual for a UFO, flying saucer or entity to just suddenly disappear into a big bang, the result of an implosion. Sometimes there is also a flash of intense light, but no sound.

High volume energy entry or exit into our atmosphere of such dimensional vehicles could be the cause for the so-called skyquakes. Skyquakes are large sonic booms with no known cause, and have happened over over the world for centuries.

An explosion is a sudden displacement of air, creating a sudden change in air pressure immediately around the explosion. This can have severe consequences on a living being. John keel mentions in The Cosmic Question:

I have examined dead animals in UFO flap areas that had blood running from their ears, noses, and mouths. This is almost a sure sign of concussion, a sudden increase in air pressure. An ordinary explosion can cause this, of course, but in many of these cases no explosion was heard.

9.2. Electrical Interference

... The driver lowered the windows as they continued to watch the object. The two observers were amazed that the hovering object was completely silent. As the witnesses continued to watch the object, some odd affects took place. The driver stated that it was as though "the electronic system of the car was having a seizure." The radio was off at the time, however they suddenly began to hear an odd clicking sound inside the vehicle, but they were unable to locate the source. At the same time it was noticed that the dash lights were dimming on and off with the beat of the clicking sound. The driver also stated that soon after he was having a problem with his cell phone dropping the signal several times. ... (Phantom and Monsters)

Electrical interference is quite common with UFO sightings especially at close range. It seems as if the EM radiation emitted is so strong that it actually prevents electricity to flow through the wires or electric circuitry. When the UFO disappears, electricity flow normal again, and the affected apparatus functions again as before with no damage.

Lights flicker and go out. The motors of cars, trucks, tractors, motorcycles and even airplanes start to stutter and stop working. They all have electric components to make the motor work, and the lack of electricity will cut the motor short. They start working again once the UFO has passed. It is not the gasoline or explosion chamber that is affected. The lights of cars also cease to work.

Cars can stop working not only with UFOs but also with the presence of entities/monsters. This shows that these beings can also emit intense radiation.

Radios and television emit static and black out.

Radar and radio transmitters are jammed.

Power stations black out. Whole towns, communities, and cities have been deprived of lights and electrical power for a short period of time when UFO's flew over.

Electric clocks and wristwatches stop.

Witnesses want to take a picture of a UFO, and their camera doesn't work. This often happens.

Car batteries and batteries of other appliances can short out completely.

An energy-field that can jam radio, black out lights, and stall motors from distances of 50 feet to perhaps 1,000 feet must be of immense power beyond anything known to us.

UFOs can also use their energetic capabilities as defense weapons to prevent the military from shooting them down. This happened twice in the famous 1976 Teheran incident. When the second F-4 Phantom jet fighter approached the light sphere:

While the object and the F-4 continued on a southerly path, a smaller second object detached itself from the first and advanced on the F-4 at high speed. Lieutenant Jafari, thinking he was under attack, tried to launch an AIM-9 sidewinder missile, but he suddenly lost all instrumentation, including weapons control, and all communication. He later stated he attempted to eject, but to no avail, as this system, which is entirely mechanical, also malfunctioned. Jafari then instituted a turn and a negative G dive as evasive action. The object fell in behind him at about 3 to 4 nautical miles (7.4 km) distance for a short time, then turned and rejoined the primary object. (Mufon)

9.3. Bodily Effects

Over the next few hours Betty's skin turned red as if badly sun burned. Her neck swelled and blisters erupted and broke on her face, scalp and eyelids. She started to vomit and continued to do so through out the night. My morning she was almost in a coma. Some time between midnight and 2 am Vickie and Colby began to suffer similar symptoms, although less severe. At first they suffered the sunburn like condition and then diarrhea and vomiting. It was a miserable night for all three victims. (NICAP)

The above is from a NICAP report called 'The Cash/Landrum Incident', that happened in Huffman, Texas, in 1980. Three people encountered a strange diamond shaped object emitting brilliant light, and a cone of fire downwards. One of the witnesses, Betty, got out of the car and stood in the brilliant light for some time. The car became hot, but that was the least of their problems. When they came home their health problems started.

Betty was taken to the hospital three days later. Her hair began to fall out and her eyes became so swollen that she was unable to see for a week. She had developed burn-like conditions. Since their encounter the other people, Vickie and Colby, were plagued with periodic outbreaks of skin troubles. But the most far reaching injury has been the damage to their eyes. Their eyelids became infected very rapidly and have never fully recovered. Doctors speculated that their conditions were due to strong infrared, ultraviolet and also possibly microwave radiation.

Some might argue that they saw a secret military device due to 23 military helicopters (several Chinooks and the rest single rotor helicopters) that showed up during the sighting, encircling the craft, and subsequently escorting it out of the area. There are no military airports nearby that can provide these helicopters, and the military would never send so many helicopters together. It is my opinion that these were also dimensional craft disguised as helicopters to provide the belief that this was a military operation. We have talked about mystery helicopters before in chapter 3. Besides, so many extremely loud helicopters would attract unwanted attention to such a supposedly secret antigravity craft. Even more interesting, is the subsequent strange appearance of a Chinook helicopter four months later:

One day in April 1981 a CH-47 flew into Dayton. As Colby watched he became very upset. Vickie decided to take him to the spot where the helicopter had landed in the hope that it would seem less frightening on the ground. When they reached the landing zone they found a lot of people there already and had to wait some time before they were allowed to go inside the helicopter and talk to the pilot. Vickie and another visitor both claim that the pilot said he had been in the area before for the purpose of checking on a UFO in trouble near Huffman. When Vickie told the pilot how glad she was to see him, because she had been one of the people burned by the UFO, he refused to talk to them any more and hustled them out of the aircraft. The UFO organization VISIT later located the pilot and questioned him. He admitted to knowing about Vickie and Betty's encounter with the UFO but maintained that he had not been in the area in December and had nothing to do with any UFO. Unless another pilot decides to come forward it seems that the source of the helicopters will remain a mystery.

Did the military send a Chinook helicopter into a town and let people go inside? I don't think the military would ever allow random civilians to enter a military helicopter. The fact that the pilot was a doppelganger of a real pilot is reminiscent to the MIB who can also assume the appearance of existing people. (see chapter 11).

UFOs can emit strong radiation that can directly affect the human body. It is usually not good. These radiation effects are also observed with entity encounters.

One of the effects of this radiation is temporal amnesia. For short amount of time one cannot remember what happened, but memories come by soon after. Quite common effect after an encounter are severe headaches, muscular spasms, excessive thirst.

Many UFO contactees suffer chronic headaches, muscular soreness, and other symptoms after their experiences. Some have anorexia (loss of appetite) and total exhaustion.

When a UFO comes close, a driver inside his car can experience electric shock and heat at the same time that their headlights and motors were affected. An intense heat wave can also be experience by a witness watching a UFO fly over. The heat can be so intense that witnesses feel suffocated, and burns develop on their skin.

In Brazil there have been many cases in which a light orb shone a light beam on a victim with severe physical effects on the human body. This light beam was pulling the victims up into the air, sometimes this was accompanied with a whirling wind. Some of the people were able to hold on to a pole or a tree and prevent the 'sucking up'. Sometimes an electric shock was felt, or there was a feeling of hot and cold at the same time, or the body would go numb. This numbness could last days afterwards. Headaches also resulted from the encounter, sometimes lasting for years after, and sleeping problems too. Some people were so badly affected that they couldn't work anymore.

Burned Skin

A young couple, very much in love, sprawled together in the back seat of an old jalopy on a deserted dirt road in the isolated back hills east of Ravenswood, West Virginia. It was a starlit, moonless night in the spring of 1967, just warm enough so the pair were able to strip to the buff comfortably.

Things were rather pleasant on that squeaky back seat until about 10:30 P.M. when a blinding bluish light poured in through the windows of the parked car.

"At first, I thought it was the police," the young man told me later. "Then we both felt a funny tingling sensation that scared us half out of our wits. I jumped up and stared into the light. It wasn't a flashlight or spotlight. It was more like a big ball of bluish fire hovering a couple of feet off the ground directly alongside the car. There was a funny sound, too, like a low hum."

His girlfriend screamed, he reported, and the light seemed to back away slightly while the humming increased in volume.

"The next thing we knew," the young man continued, "it was gone. Just like that. We jumped into our clothes and got the hell out of there. Another funny thing, when we got into town it was after 12:30. We couldn't figure it out. It seemed like we only looked at that light for a couple of seconds. But somehow it must have taken two hours."

*Their first inclination was to run to the police but they decided against it, since they weren't supposed to be on that road doing what they were doing in the first place. ("Her old man would've killed me!") They drove around for several minutes until their hysteria subsided and then he dropped her off at home. The next morning both the boy and the girl woke up to find themselves heavily "sunburned" from head to foot. The boy's eyes were almost swollen shut for two weeks afterward. It was not an easy matter for them to explain how they managed to get a total, and quite painful, sunburn at night in the early spring. (John Keel in The Mothman Prophecies)*

It is not unusual for witnesses to get their skin burned when they are close to a UFO. The energy emitted from the object must be of intense high frequency radiation, such as infrared and microwave. Light beams from a UFO can also burn the skin.

Some witnesses have touched a landed flying saucer and their hands were burned. What looks like a cold metal flying saucer skin is actually an intense energy form.

Skin burns can also result from contact with entities. In one case the person was on a cemetery when he was pushed down by an invisible force, and then his friend came to rescue. After they had driven away, his back hurt:

*I mentioned this to my friend, and she insisted on pulling over to look at my back. She switched the hood light on and pulled the collar of my hoodie down to look. I heard her mutter, "What the f*ck?" She took a photo of my back and showed it to me. The skin between my shoulder blades was reddened, and several little blisters had started to appear (they later swelled up and popped; it was as if I had gotten a sunburn or a chemical burn). There weren't any scratches or cuts, it was a relatively subtle mark, but it was still clearly there. We certainly couldn't figure out how I'd gotten burned. I hadn't rubbed up against anything, I hadn't touched my back. I'd been wearing my hoodie all night and there were no tears or marks in the fabric. And it hurt. It continued to sting for several days. (Phantom and Monsters)*

There are also accounts of entities coming into contact with wood and leaving scorch marks.

There are many cases in Brazil where farmers and fishermen, and other people, were burned by the radiation from light orbs and their light beams. Strangely the people who got burned, sometimes reported that the light was very hot, while others felt a coldness coming over them. This coldness can last a while after the encounter. A doctor in Colares who treated about forty people said the burns were on the chest, throat and face. The area of the burn was between ten and twenty centimeters (four to eight inches). The skin would almost immediately peel but also heal quickly. In every case she found two small puncture wounds in the center of these burns. She also did blood tests on them, and all had abnormal low levels of hemoglobin. Two people died the same day they were hit by a light beam.

Usually the light beams come from UFOs or light orbs. Bob Pratt mentions in his book UFO Danger Zone a case in which a being shone a light beam from a device he was holding in his hand:

"I could see a person, but only from the chest up. I think it was a man, but he had on what was like a diving suit. I saw the face of the man, and his eyes were very small. He had an instrument like a pistol. He pointed the weapon at me and shined the beam three times, hitting me in the chest all three times almost in the same place. It was very hot. I think each time he took blood." The burns left three, little, pinpoint scars in a triangle on the upper right side of her chest. ... "It was hot and it hurt," she said. "It was like being stuck with a needle. I bled at all three points. At the moment it happened I got very thirsty. I was terrified, but I couldn't move my legs. I was paralyzed. ...

Conjunctivitis

"I was numb on my left side for three to four months," he said. "My left side around my waist and hip felt paralyzed." He also had trouble with his left eye for a year and a half. "It swelled so much that I couldn't sleep at night for a while afterwards because I couldn't close it. I was blind in it for a few days, and I still have trouble with it." (UFO Danger Zone by Bob Pratt)

Conjunctivitis is also common with both UFO and entity sightings. Conjunctivitis is inflammation of the eye. It makes the eye appear pink or reddish. There may also be pain, burning, scratchiness, or itchiness. Swelling of the eye, may also occur.

Conjunctivitis can occur as a result of exposure to intense IR and UV radiation.

Numbness

"Antonio told me he went into his backyard one night to go to the bathroom and, while he was out there, the object appeared with a very, very bright light over his head."

"He ran back into the house screaming and, when he got to the kitchen door, he fell down. His wife pulled him inside. He was dizzy. He felt heat on the back of his arms and legs and back. His arms and legs were numb for eight days." (UFO Danger Zone by Bob Pratt)

A lot of people in Brazil who were in close proximity to a light sphere, or who were 'zapped' by a light beam, had numbness in part of their body, or their entire body. It would last from hours to days. These Brazilian UFOs would also cause many other physical ailments.

9.4. Soil, Plants and Animals

The day after this happened, Joana and others went back to the tree where she and Elisvalda had seen the two little men. "The tree was burned, and all the leaves had dropped off," Joana said. "And where the light hit the ground, under where the UFO hovered, there was no more grass." (UFO Danger Zone by Bob Pratt)

The appearance of dimensional beings and their vehicles into our physical dimension is always one of intense energy, especially of electromagnetic radiation. This radiation can have strong effect on the environment around their presence, sometimes with harmful and even devastating consequences.

Soil

With UFO landings we sometimes find that the landing area has been severely burned or baked, or has a burning ring. Trees and shrubs nearby can also be burned or singed. The landing area can remain without vegetation for years.

In some rare cases, the ground has been found radioactive after an object has landed. This might be the by-product of the gamma rays, which are one of the energy constituents of the objects, not just an effect of some mechanical process.

Plants

There is a long history of affected vegetation where a UFO has landed, hovered or come close to trees. The emitted radiation causes trees to turn black, their branches dried up and curling. They can even carbonize. Grass and shrubbery can be set on fire.

Animals

Animals are often the first to notice that a UFO or entity is nearby. Maybe they can hear ultrasounds emitted by UFOs, maybe they are sensitive to the EM radiation, or maybe they have a psychic instinct that allows them to feel anything potentially dangerous in their environment.

The first sign that something strange is near is the restlessness of animals. After that, they often react with fear, so there must be something unnatural about it, because most animals are well familiar with motors, engines and other apparatus.

The most ferocious guard dogs will most often be scared and hide. A dog might initially run up to a UFO or entity, and bark, but only to return with fear. It has also been observed repeatedly that (guard) dogs were sound asleep during an entire UFO presence, or during the presence of a strange entity killing livestock. The dimensionals in these cases are able to selectively keep the dogs asleep while they do the killing.

With some UFO sightings, witnesses have reported an eerie silence, especially in otherwise noisy woods. All animals are suddenly quite. It seems that a UFO can emit a wide spread radiation around itself that will affect all animals, from insects to mammals. The natural reaction for animals to a perceived danger is to be totally quiet as to not betray their presence.

Sometimes an animal is found dead at a UFO sighting, without any apparent cause of death. This could have been by the intense radiation. Even groups of animals have been found dead.

When there is a period of high UFO activity and of monster sightings, domestic animals tend to disappear. Sometimes a dog that runs after a monster or entity is never seen again. Dogs can also disappear the day after a UFO sighting, or livestock go missing. John Keel brought forward the idea that these monsters/entities, being temporary energy forms, need some living substance (meat) to replenish their energy in order to prolong their temporary physical manifestation. Domestic animals are easy prey. Maybe this also explains the cases where animals are found dead with neat holes in their skin, and all their blood sucked out, presumably done by the chupacabra, another strange creature that doesn't belong in our world. More about the chupacabra can be read in my article of The Chupacabra: Intelligent Bipedal Predator.

9.5. The Nature of EM Radiation

It has become clear that UFOs and entities emit intense radiation that harm biological beings. So, what kind of EM radiation would be responsible?

Massive doses of X-rays, gamma rays, and ultraviolet and infrared radiation will show the same bodily effects as witnessed with UFO witnesses or contactees.

I have already mentioned that when the dimensionals enter our world, they appear as high intensity high frequency energy units in the form of light spheres. They can then move through the electromagnetic spectrum, and in the process they emit intense gamma and X-ray radiation, microwaves and ultraviolet radiation before they enter the visible spectrum and become visible to our eyes. These types of radiation can have harmful effects upon their surroundings, including living beings.

Ultraviolet Radiation

We have already mentioned that UFO and monster witnesses can come down with conjunctivitis. It is known that intense UV radiation causes harm to the eyes. Usually this last for days.

Microwave Radiation

With close encounters of UFOs, the interior of cars and even the plastic frame of a person's glasses were melted from the inside out, something that is suggestive of very intense microwave radiation.

Microwave radiation can also be the cause of a rapid rise of temperature inside a car when a UFO hovers nearby.

Scientific studies show us that parts of the body that are sensitive to heat can be damaged by microwave radiation of a sufficient power level. This includes the testes, which is the reason microwave radiation may affect the reproductive ability of men, even causing infertility.

John Keel writes in The Cosmic Question:

Microwaves affect the eyes and the testes in particular. I was puzzled during my in-depth interviews with male witnesses when they told me in hushed confidential tones how their testicles bothered them after their sightings. Some later developed nonspecific infections with all the symptoms of venereal disease.

This reminded me of a woman in my town who had a light sphere hover over her house and illuminate the entire living room in an intense brilliant white light. She mentioned that afterwards her breasts were swollen. (you can read the entire account in my article of Strange Encounters of the Unusual Kind):

"The only aftereffect I had immediately after the encounter was that my breasts became so tender and so sore, they filled up like I was 16 years old. I also had trouble sleeping in the following two weeks."

People working directly with microwave fields have claimed a variety of symptoms, including eyestrain, headaches, fatigue and sleep disturbance. These effects are due to the fields of microwave radiation interacting with the body's central nervous system. We find these symptoms also with UFO witnesses and especially with contactees.

Contactees who claim to have been very close to grounded saucers commonly suffer excessive thirst afterwards. Exposure to microwaves can lead to dehydration of the body.

Microwaves heat up metals, and this is used in certain metal industries. With UFO encounters there have been cases in which the weapons of soldiers became too hot to hold.

The typical humming heard by people when a UFO is nearby or hovers over a house can also be caused by microwaves. Microwaves can be heard, not by the ears, but by skull bone absorption of the microwaves. Even the spinal fluid and the brain itself can absorb them and start to vibrate.

X-Rays

I remember reading of an account in which a woman was sitting on her porch at night, and a UFO or bright light sphere appeared above her illuminating the entire environment in such a bright light that she could see the bones in her arms. This suggests that with the visible light there was also a massive dose of X-rays emitted by the UFO.

In the Buff Ledge UFO case of August 7th, 1968, at Lake Champlain, Vermont, a man also saw the bones in his hand:

The craft now moved directly overhead, and shot a beam at Michael and Janet. Grabbing Janet's shoulder, Michael pulled both of them on their backs on the dock. Suddenly, Michael was overcome with the fear of being kidnapped. He remembers screaming, "We don't want to go!" The light from the beam was so bright that Michael recalls being able to see the bones in his hand, like an X-ray. The two teenagers both later related that the beam had a "liquid" feeling to it, and gave them the sense of free floating. (Source)

Gamma Rays

Gamma rays are extremely high frequency electromagnetic waves associated with radioactivity.

Radioactivity, higher than the background radiation, is sometimes found at UFO landing sites. But this seems to be rare.

The emission of gamma rays might also be responsible for strange ailments some UFO witnesses have afterwards that are typical for exposure to intense radioactivity.

9.6. Deadly Effects

With UFO activity animals tend to disappear, farm animals and dogs in particular. Animals have been found dead when UFOs were seen over pastures. UFO radiation can be deadly.

In Uruguay 1977, A light orb radiating intense heat came close to a rancher and his dog. The entire case can be read here. The dog was within five meters of the object. Three days later he died. The autopsy report from the veterinarian is quite unusual:

"The hair along the animal's spine was sticky but completely hard. The fat under the skin was found on the outside. The fat is normally solid, so to get to the outside it had to be melted and come through the pores. Once it was outside it solidified again. The animal was exposed to a very high temperature that can't be reached naturally by the dog.

"All the blood vessels had been bleeding very much and all the capillaries were broken. The rupture of the blood vessels was caused by an increase in temperature that couldn't be natural. The liver, normally dark and red, was completely yellow, caused by a high fever.

"All the blood vessels were yellow too. With all the blood vessels broken, the animal started bleeding inside and lost so much blood that 48 hours later the amount of blood he had circulated was insufficient and he died of a heart attack.

"When we took the skin off the dog, we didn't see any marks. He didn't have any bruises or anything... nor was the hair burned. The conclusion was that something very hot had caused this."

The strange thing is that the dog sat looking at the object. A normal heat that would cause such severe bodily harm would make anyone, animal or human, instinctively run away. Although a normal heat was felt by the farmer, it seems that the damage to the dog was done by radiation. The farmer got away with just a burned arm.

People exposed to UFO radiation of sufficient energy have come down with leukemia. When people die weeks or months after a UFO sighting, it is impossible to figure out if the UFO radiation was the reason, although everything might point to it. John Keel said that "an unknown number of persons have died after their encounters with monsters, spacemen, and UFOs". It is impossible to know how many because there is no way to collect and document all such reports.

In Brazil, 1966, two men (Jose Viana and Manuel Pereira da Cruz) were found dead on top of a hill with lead masks next to their head. The night before local had seen several light spheres shooting orange beams towards the ground. This has become known as the lead mask case and was published in detail in The Flying Saucer Review of March 1967.

Also in Brazil, around 1977, many UFO light orbs and other shapes were seen to descend on the island of Colares and hit many people with light beams, resulting in severe bodily effects and several deaths. It was a mystery to the purpose of these attacks. This is an important case, or event, because many people were affected, and it shows that these UFO light beams are dangerous.

By November 1977 doctor Wellaide Cecim Carvalho, the physician in charge of the health unit on Colares Island, took care of to some 35 people claiming to have been touched by the strange light. She took blood samples, and concluded that the victims suffered from generalized hypertermia, superficial chronic headache, burnings, intense heat, nauseas, tremors in the body, giddiness, asthenia and presented very small orifices in the skin where they were hit by the rays.

She wrote: "All of them had suffered lesions to the face or the thoracic area." The lesions, looking like radiation injuries, "began with intense reddening of the skin in the affected area. Later the hair would fall out and the skin would turn black. There was no pain, only a slight warmth. One also noticed small puncture marks in the skin. The victims were men and women of varying ages, without any pattern."

... Most symptoms usually disappeared after seven days.

Some people's health never fully recovered. Here again, we have intense radiation beamed at people with ill consequences.

Jacques Vallée mentions five death in another area of Brazil: Parnarama.

At least five people are said to have died near Parnarama following close encounters with what were described as boxlike UFOs equipped with powerful light beams. These objects, which have been called chupas by the local population, fly over the wooded areas and the river valleys at night.

All of the victims in Parnarama were deer hunters who had climbed into trees during the night, as is frequently the case in that part of Brazil. People hunt and fish, not for sport or entertainment but to supplement their family's food supply, and they do it at night because it is cooler and because they have a greater chance of finding game in the woods.

In most cases the witnesses reported rectangular objects (sometimes compared to ice boxes) flying over the treetops and shining a beam toward the earth. The chupas are said to make a humming sound like a refrigerator or a transformer, and this sound does not change when the object accelerates. The object does not seem large enough to contain a human pilot. It has a light on the bottom and a light at one end, giving a sealed beam like a car headlight.

The victims were Abel Boro, who died on October 17, 1981, while hunting with Ribamar Ferreira; Raimundo Souza, who died on October 19, 1981, while hunting with Anastacio Barbosa; Jose Vitorio and Dionizio General, who died on an undetermined date, the latter three days after the UFO encounter; and a man named Ramon, who lived in Parnarama.

Muldoon and Richman quoted the mayor of Parnarama as confirming the cases, and the chief of police, Geraldo dos Santos Magela, as stating that he had examined two of the bodies, finding that the blood had been "sucked from them."

Ribamar Ferreira described a light coming over him and his friend Abel Boro: it was so bright that it turned night into day, he said. Abel screamed as the object-looking in this case like a giant spinning truck tire with lights on it surrounded his body with a glittering glow. Ferreira ran to Abel's house and returned with his family: they found Abel Boro dead, his body white "as if drained of blood." (It is normal for corpses to develop a whitish-gray color because the hemoglobin breaks down after death. This does not mean that the body has been drained of blood, as witnesses often assume.)

*In another case, Dionizio General was atop a hill when an object hovered above him and shot a beam in his direction; it was described as "a big ray of fire." The witness, Jose dos Santos, testified that Dionizio seemed to receive a shock and came rolling down the hill. For the following three days he was insane with terror; then he died. (Jacques Vallee in Confrontations, A Scientist's Search for Alien Contact)*

Brazil seems to be a dangerous place for coming into contact with UFOs. Another case: Joao Prestes Filho came home in the village of Aracariguama was hit by a bright light from outside. Soon after, he noticed that the flesh around his leg was coming away from the bone and looked like "meat that has been allowed to boil for a while!" Several members of Filho's family arrived not long after. All noted how gravely ill he looked. His usually fair skin was now a "roasted red" color. His hands were particularly deformed from the assault, twisted and burnt. Strangely, his face bore burn marks, but his hair was seemingly unaffected and completely intact. He was also struggling to speak. After his admittance to a hospital, doctors were at a loss as to what caused such rapid burns and deterioration. The medic and orderly who was with Filho in his final hours would later state it was as if he was "decomposing alive!" Flesh continued to fall away from the bone. When the tissue around his jaw fell away he could no longer communicate. He died soon after.

In Colombia, Arcesio Bermudez (1969) shone a flashlight to a light source and received a 'magnetic blast', causing him to feel sick hours later, developing signs of hypothermia shortly after.

*He was sent to a clinic in Bogotá. Feeling ill within hours of the event, his malady extended for three days until a relative came to collect him and take him to Bogotá for treatment by car. According to his family, Bermúdez was cold to the touch, and that he leaned against his sister's side in the vehicle. Creepier still is the detail that the side of the sister's body "remained cold until the day she died." Bermudez's preternatural chill was such that the nurses at the Bogotá health center were unable to draw blood samples, as his vital fluid had "crystallized". Officially, he died from unknown causes. (*Inexplicata*)*

Never good to shine any light to a UFO!

There have been more cases, not always that well documented, but I guess you get the idea: not all 'aliens' are of the friendly kind!

9.7. Shockwave Concussion

There is another possibility for a deadly outcome. When dimensional beings or vehicles appear into our dimension or disappear to their dimension, there is a sudden displacement of air that can result in an explosive event because of the intense energy involved. If a person is close to an explosion, the shockwave can cause severe internal injury that can harm but also kill.

The sudden appearance or disappearance of an entity does not necessary have to generate an explosive sound. Entities have been seen appearing and disappearing in just a flash of light. The shockwave might also be one of infrasound or ultrasound, not audible to our ears. It is also quite possible that there other kinds of energetic shockwaves generated that we are not aware of but that are harmful to a person.

The effects of being exposed to an explosion are well studied in military circles. The predominant post explosion injuries among survivors involve standard penetrating and blunt trauma (by debris or bomb fragments to flying around) aside from blast lung which is the most common fatal injury among initial survivors. Blast lung is damage to the lungs because of the increased air pressure. Proximity to a conventional explosion can also cause concussion of the brain. Immediately after, or even weeks after a concussion, nosebleeds can happen. One wonders if the frequent nose bleeds abductees have, is not from the insertion of an implant, but the result of the energetic shockwave causing a concussion, when the dimensional spirits emerge into their bedroom. We hear so many times that the 'aliens' created a 'porthole' in their bedroom so that they can appear straight into the bedroom itself from the other dimension.

Concussion can also cause headaches, confusion, weakness, feeling dazed and numb, and problems with short term memory. We find those symptoms also with abductees, and encounters with UFOs and strange entities.

Is it possible that some strange (411) deaths of people in the woods are the result of the impact of an energetic shockwave on the physical body, not causing external injuries, but a concussion strong enough that it results in death, and thus not showing an apparent cause of death as is often the case in missing 411 cases?

9.8. Healing

It is rare but a UFO sighting can result in a healing of a witness. For example, a car was engulfed with a brilliant light from a UFO while the driver had his hand, with a swollen infected finger, hanging outside the window. The next day his finger was completely healed. Other people have been cured after a UFO encounter. They often supposed that it was due to the intention of the aliens to cure the person.

However, the healing might rather be the effect of the emitted high frequency radiation. Although this intense radiation is often harmful, at much lower exposure, they can promote healing of the body.

Usually those who were healed were suffering from nervous disorders, arthritis, and other ailments which respond to infrared and ultraviolet radiation, and treatment by VLF and microwaves.

Radiation with different frequencies are now being used in hospitals to promote healing of the body.

9.9. Fire

A Florida law enforcement officer out with his dogs at 6:20 p.m. on January 2, 2011, watched a "glowing metallic sphere" shoot off into the sky from his backyard, according to testimony from the Mutual UFO Network MUFON witness reporting database. "It went upwards as soon as I opened the sliding rear door and the dogs went out barking," the witness stated. "With no sound, bolted upwards until reaching cloud cover and made a 90-degree angle heading west in a very high rated speed until I could not see it any more into the sky." Then the witness looked at the ground where the object had been. "On the ground I noticed two circular marks on the grass itself. Marks are sort of circular burned patches on the ground with a white powdery ash. I am a State of Florida law enforcement officer and a retired Army Infantryman. I have seen it all in the civilian life as well as in combat; and there is nothing like I have seen before." No town name was mentioned in the public portion of the MUFON report, which was filed on January 5, 2011. No images or video were included with the report. )Educating Humanity)

I have already mentioned that fires might erupt in poltergeist cases. It is not that common, but it can happen. Usually they are small fires of small objects, of all kinds, that spontaneously catch fire, even under the eyes of the occupants of the house.

It can be that the entities themselves intend to create these fires, as part of their scare tactics, or to erase any evidence of their existence that has been gathered by the person.

I once interviewed a man in my own town who was visited by particular beings who were looking for a solution to their problems. He made sculptures of their images, and after a couple of years had a large collection of these sculptures in his garage. When these beings finally decided he could not help them, they left after his garage caught fire and destroyed all the sculptures. Destroying any evidence of their existence and/or appearance was more important to them than the possible consequences to the person they contacted. Luckily the fire was discovered early enough to save his house, and their lives. Contact with dimensional beings always carries risks that can get out of (our) hand. (you can read about this particular story in my article of Strange Encounters of the Unusual Kind)

It is also possible that in other cases the fires are the result of their presence. The presence of dimension beings in our world is always accompanied by the emission of high frequency radiation. Microwaves heat materials from the inside out, and they can catch on fire. Microwaves are used in weapons systems that heat up the water molecules in the skin of people. Microwave lasers can set materials on fire.

Burned grass is common at sites where UFO have landed, touched the ground or just hovered above it. The vegetation around it can also be torched. This is not by ordinary fire but by radiation. The landing area can remain without vegetation for years.

10. Our Society Being Controlled

This is a topic that has been brought forward by a few researchers. It belongs in the realm of speculation, but there might be something to it.

We are well familiar with governments controlling our lives, and even secret groups manipulating the governments. It is about power and money.

It has come to the attention of several researchers that we, together with our world leaders, are being manipulated by beings behind our physical world. The magician behind the curtain in the Wizard Of Oz. We don't see them, we don't know who they really are, and most people don't even know they exists.

Not all dimensional beings are interested in manipulating humans. Some are curious, some are not interested. But there is group that actively have been and still is manipulating humanity on an individual level, but certainly also on a the level of whole societies. They appear not only as weird entities or monsters, or in vehicles, for specific purposes, but they also bring forth belief systems by appearing as religious figures. They do not only cause fear or bewilderment but also provide individuals with (false) enlightenment experiences and awareness of cosmic consciousness.

Appear a couple of times as Mother Mary, with some dire prophecies, and soon thousands and thousands flock to the site. Appear as extraterrestrials and show them hybrids, and after a couple of decades the majority of people belief in ETs visiting our planet.

Are they just using us for entertainment? Or are they manipulating our minds for a specific purpose. Here we are entering the realm of speculation. It seems that behind the dimensional veil, there are beings who need our energy. After all, they are composed of energy themselves. It seems, according to certain sources, that they need certain types of energy that only humans can provide, in particular emotional energy that is released by fear and worship.

I am going to leave it at that. If you want to know more my article of Unmasking the Sidhe might give you a clue.

11. Men-in-Black and Other Mystery Men

11.1. Their Appearance

11.2. The Message

11.3. MIB Cars

11.4. Non-MIB Strangers

11.1. Their Appearance

I live in Colorado and have been my entire life, born and raised here. I've never really been a believer in the ghosts and ghouls and aliens and that sort of thing. my family has always been very grounded in reality and I have been taught that way from a very young age.

Now onto the actual post. About three days ago my mom and I were just hanging out at home and eating some pizza. It was about 7:30 at night and was already pretty dark outside. There was a knock at the door and I told my mom that I would get it for here as it was most likely just someone who had lost their dog or something of that nature. However, I opened the door to be greeted by these two men, both dressed in black suits with grey fedora looking hats. They both looked almost identical to one another and I was kind of freaked out. One of the men said that they were a part of some plumbing repair company or something like that and asked me to show him our radiator. Our house is newer so we did not have a radiator. I told him this, and the other leaned in towards me and asked if my mother was home. I said yes and called her over. The moment she walked around the corner and saw the two men standing there she told them off and slammed the door in their faces. I was honestly very confused as I am a newbie to this whole conspiracy world and didn't know much about it. My mom then sat me down and told me about a time when I was only about three or four that the exact same men had come to our condo (which is what we were living in at the time) and had tried to get in the house. I told her that they had asked to see the radiator and she told me that was the exact same line that they tried to use to get into our house when we lived in the condo. I started researching the men and found the tails and stories of the men in black, whose descriptions almost exactly matched that of the two men.

(Reddit)

Throughout history mystery men and women have unexpectedly shown up in people's lives, and delivered a message or performed a bewildering act. Sometimes these visits are utterly weird, sometimes they are so normal, that only a long time afterwards it is found to be out of place. Just like UFOs, 'aliens', monsters and other entities, their appearance is short and to the point. They cannot stay long as they don't belong in our world. They too are dimensional beings.

The beings with oriental looks and wearing black clothing have gained much attention, and have been called Men-in-Black. However don't always picture the MIB as dressed in black. They can wear any type of clothing in any color. It is only since the 1950's that the Men-in-Black term is being used. It was originally believed that they were U.S. Air Force officers intimidating the witnesses. This was just another belief system that has no roots in reality.

These ominous beings come in all kinds of clothing and skin color. Like everything else with those dimensionals, and in the UFO phenomenon, there is wide variety of dimensional strangers appearing in our lives.

Typically, but not all of them, are tall, have long blond hair, angular, oriental faces, olive or dark skin. For some reason their hair sometimes seems strange, like silver in color or colored, dyed hair. Their features are nothing new, they are the same as historical beings such as fairies, demons and even gods. Even the long fingers of the MIB are legendary with historical entities.

Their clothing, not always black, often looks brand new, even their shoes. In one case the MIB's shoes were spot clean, although he had to have walked through wet muddy soil to arrive at the door. Another sure sign that they are dimensionals who just appear out of nowhere at the door.

In some cases people checked when the MIB were leaving the house, and they found that the mystery person(s) had vanished immediately.

In so many cases there is an odd little thing about them that just does not seem right. That can be make-up, their hair, or the way they walk. Or they are not familiar with our eating and drinking habits or food. Sometimes they speak mechanically as if reciting a memorized speech. They can have trouble breathing, often wheezing and gasping between words. At other times they speak fluently. They can be dressed too lightly for the weather.

In my opinion, the Men-in-Black, and other non-MIB entities, are artificial elementals sent out into our world to fulfill their pre-programmed purpose. In some cases they might be actual true dimensional beings. Most likely some of these visitations are actually induced mental experiences.

There is an interesting case in which a woman who worked in a retail store. She saw a black car arriving, two men-in-black entered the store, asking about her car (she was using the car of her mother's fiancé, a military person). But the security camera only showed her presence not the two men. Besides the possibility of an induced mental experience, it is also possible that these entities appear in a light spectrum that is just outside the range of cameras, but still within the range of the human eye. You can find the story on Reddit. She also had some strange happenings for a few months afterwards at home. These kind of entities often latch on to you for a while.

11.2. The Message

One day my two friends and I were out late on the levee (in Stockton, California) and we saw a bright "star" (it looked like a star) orbiting the sky VERY fast. As we watched, it stopped in mid-air. Then five more "stars" appeared. That's when we realized they weren't stars, they were lights; lit up on what looked to be a UFO, and that's when we started panicking. But then the UFO turned into a white cloud, then pink, then blood red and it vanished into thin air. We literally ran out of that levee and I went to hang with my best friend and told her everything. I thought it would be just a memory at that point, so I went home and fell asleep.

I woke up to the bell ringing very early the next morning and when I went to look, I saw a man in a black suit with a briefcase at my door. I thought he was just someone trying to sell me something. I was just annoyed. It was so early. So I waited until he left, but he wouldn't leave, he was just staring into my house like a mannequin for, like, 5 minutes straight. I wanted to see if he had a car but when I looked out the window, I noticed there was five more of the men outside my house, just staring at it blankly. My heart skipped a beat. I was freaked out, so I was for sure dialing the police at this point. But as soon as I started dialing, they looked at me at the exact same second. I don't even know how they saw me through the little crack I was watching them from. They stared at me coldly for a few moments then, again, at the exact same time, they walked away and got into their car. They all watched me, even the driver as he was driving away. I never spoke of it since. This is real and it's terrifying. Ever since then I always feel like I'm only safe in my room with my windows closed and locked up. I feel like they watch my house. (Phantom and Monsters)

I think it is important to look further than the mere appearance of the MIB. Such stories often get filed without any further inquiry. We know that MIB often appear immediately after a sighting before the witness had the chance to report it or to tell anyone. In the above account, the witness was afraid when seeing the UFO the previous night. Fear seems to be a key component with the MIB, even before they arrive. I wonder if the fear, from a UFO sighting, actually attracts the visitation of MIB.

In many of these experiences, they show up before the witnesses have the chance to talk about their UFO sighting. This shows that we are dealing with dimensional beings. They know they have been sighted, and for some reason they immediately create a response by sending the MIB.

MIB can flash an identification card showing that they are from the government, be it the CIA, the Air Force, the Ministry of Defense, or other military officers. They also claimed to be from the Civil Aeronautics Administration, from the police, or to be scientists. They can even use the names of existing army officers. They can even resemble the men they are imitating. That also requires to have knowledge of the real people in detail, but that is not surprising because dimensional beings can gain access to anything in our world from their dimensional world where space and time is different.

MIB don't always identify themselves. They can show up, give a warning, and walk away.

MIB seem to appear to give warning but not always. The warning is about not talking about the sighting, or to order silence, or to not publicize any information about the sighting, to discontinue research in UFOs. it can also be overtly threatening.

At other times they show up with extensive questionnaires, not about the UFO sighting the person(s) had, but about the personal life of the witness.

In some cases they pretend to be workmen working around telephone poles, for example. This is a form of overt stalking, just like parking their black Cadillac across the street.

In one case a MIB from a Cadillac tried to abduct a young girl (who witnessed a UFO).

In some cases the warning is delivered over the telephone, without any MIB showing up.

The question is why to the dimensional beings, associated with the appearance of UFOs, put in an effort to scare the witnesses? I think it is a reflection of the fear inside the witnesses themselves. That leaves the question why they would go to the trouble to reflect this fear? Equally why would they show up with extensive questionnaires that have nothing to do with the sighting itself? In the end it seems that it is just another ploy or play to bewilder and confuse us, so they can go on doing their business in our world, whatever that is.

This would also explain why the appearance or MIB, or mystery people in general, are not always threatening. In one case they suggested that if the witness should encounter a similar machine (UFO) in the future, he should cooperate with its occupants and keep any conversations with them to himself. In another case they said that the UFOs will be back at a certain date. In yet another case, the man was driven outside the city and then taken for a trip into space.

Or they might simply ask for a glass of water. Asking for a glass of water seems to be a textbook guideline. We have such cases with the late 1800s airship occupants, and with flying saucer 'aliens'.

11.3. MIB Cars

In the past the devil or a black clothed, hooded man would drive a black chariot. Now, MIB show up in black Cadillacs, with peculiar purplish glows lighting their interiors. Actually, they can drive around in all sorts of cars, sometimes with tinted windows. Cadillacs are not the only cars they show up with, they have also been seen with a Buick, Chrysler Imperial, Jaguar, a blue station wagon, even a yellow Volkswagen... always new.

Being dimensional beings, they obviously don't own a car. It is a manifestation that reflects our own mind.

Witnesses have recorded the license plates of the MIB cars, but police checks would show that these plates were not in use. That implies an intelligence that can figure out what license plates are in use or not. The dimensional beings can access any information they want.

'Aliens' like to appear with insignia on their chest, and MIB sometimes have insignia printed on their door of their cars. They have appeared with the symbol of the eye inside a triangle, a well-known masonic symbol, and they even identified themselves once as the 'Nation of the Third Eye'. We should not pay too much attention to it as like to keep us busy with unsolvable puzzles.

11.4. Non-MIB Strangers

The typical Men-in-Black are not the only dimensional beings that pay us a visit, or cross our paths with mysterious appearances or messages. We should not put the MIB in a special category. The appearance of MIB vary anyway, and actually we have a whole range of strangers intruding into our reality to play out their part.

There are plenty of sightings of hooded strangers along the road who disappear when the car passes by. Hooded strangers also lurk around street corners or under street lights at night, or in dark places, staring or scaring the witnesses. These hooded strangers have been seen for centuries. Some have glowing eyes too.

The Grinning Man is another of those entities, usually in black suit, with a dark complexion and craggy foreign face. He also appears in bedrooms.

Mysterious strangers also like to show up in coffee shops.

Most of these appearances have no obvious meaning. Intimidation or fear seems to form the basis.

Mystery men showing up giving warnings or prophecies are common in ufology. Many contactees have these kinds of experiences. More disturbing is that throughout history royals, political leaders and even military leaders have had visits from such mystery men, usually leading to more war, intrigue and bloodshed.

12. Human Spirits and Alien Beings

12.1. Human Spirits

12.2. Spirits and Aliens

12.3. The Stressful Environment

12.4. Sleep Paralysis

12.1. Human Spirits

There is sometimes confusion about what a ghost is or a spirit. Basically it is a question of terminology. A ghost is a residual energy of a previously living being, human or animal. It is not animated by a divine essence and has no consciousness as such. Ghosts are usually seen at graveyards, or at places where an intense emotional trauma took place, like murders or battle scenes. Sensitive or psychic people can see them, and also occasionally a normal person under certain (energetic) circumstances.

Spirits are conscious beings who have no physical body, and live in the spiritual realms, from the lowest astral to the highest mental levels. When we die, that is lay off the physical body, we are in the spirit body. As I have mentioned before, in these dimensional realms, everything is energy, and a spirit can form itself a body form to his liking. Although there is a lot of freedom in the astral realms, human spirits are not free of their emotional problems. For reasons of their own, some human spirits choose to stay on the physical level. Some of them don't even know that they are dead, and can hang around on the physical level for quite a while. Generally they are invisible to us but they can manifest into our physical world in different ways.

Animal spirits, after they die, can also remain on the physical level, usually only for a short time. There are also other kind of spirit entities roaming around on the lower astral levels, who like to bother us.

Human spirits residing in the astral world can drastically interfere in our lives in negative way. Then we speak of hauntings or poltergeist. So do 'alien' beings, they are just spirits of as a different kind.

12.2. Spirits and Aliens

In Ufology, a lot of people still think that ufonauts are physical extraterrestrials visiting our planet. Others have now come to the conclusion that we are actually dealing with dimensional entities, although it is still believed that they still come from other places in the universe. That might be possible but I think that they really belong to this planet. Maybe they came here a long time ago, but they definitely have been around here for a very long time. The 'aliens' hang out in the same astral or etheric world as deceased human spirits. They are of a similar nature and live in their own realm.

With aliens I mean the typical beings associated with flying saucers and abduction events, like Greys, Reptilians and other nasties. They are non-human spirits.

What we traditionally know about negative spirits in haunted houses is just the same what we see with the so-called aliens, although the latter are more sophisticated and operate outside the house too. Poltergeist happens with both human spirits and with UFO/alien presence.

Spirits (we only talking about negative ones) can cling to a person. We then speak of a spirit attachment, or even possession, although the latter one does not always have to be dramatic. They do so because they feed of the energy of the living person. Over time this person will develop ailments and diseases because of his lack of vital energy. We see the same with aliens. Psychics have seen people whose attachments were (typically) reptilians. But Greys too attach themselves to a person, often from early childhood. Maybe they don't always hang around, but they keep a firm link to that person throughout his entire life, and from time to time interfere with his life in many different ways.

Spirits appear in our bedrooms, and so do the 'aliens', Greys, Reptilians, Mantis, and many other alien forms.

12.3. The Stressful Environment

The state of harmony in a person or an environment determines if good or bad spirits or aliens are present or not. Like attracts like.

If a person is bothered by negative entities then usually there is an imbalance in his own bodily energy field (aura). Nobody is perfect and we go through life with all kind of traumas, so we all do have some imbalances in our aura. But some have more than others, or the trauma(s) they went through caused a really large fissure in their aura. Then spirits can easily attach. The amount of fear or emotional issues also play a role.

When you look at the lives of contactees and abductees, you will also notice a lot of them have a lot of problems in their lives, often made worse by the repeated contacts. Some of them develop substance abuse (addictions). Drugs and alcohol have always been known to attract lower (bad) spirits and aliens are not the exception.

When a house is built on 'negative' energy lines, then the house can be haunted. Stressful earth energy lines that can cause imbalances are fault lines and moving underground water streams, among others. Dowsers call it geopathic stress. When this geopathic stress is strong enough, negative spirits are attracted to such places, and can make a house haunted and bother the occupants. I would not be surprised if contactees and abductees are living in such houses. When two geopathic stress lines cross inside a house, this can be really harmful and develop into illnesses, and heightened spirit interference, such as poltergeist.

Geopathic stress can be remedied by dowsers and energy workers. Clearing oneself of emotional imbalances and fear might take a longer time, but is a necessary thing to restore one's own balance and to get rid of spirit interference.

Houses and buildings can also built up a lot of negative energy by many years or even centuries of negative emotions or actions of those who lived in it, and this can attract negative spirits too. Ritual objects, but also ordinary household objects can also hold negative charges and even malevolent spirits. One has to be careful when buying antique or used ritual objects or statues and placing them in one's home.

12.4. Sleep Paralysis

I am almost a doctor .. final year of med school .. This happened to me cause coming from a medical view I don't believe in the paranormal but I had to share this with someone . When I was around 22 ... 2 years back.. I was sleeping .. it was midnight I guess then suddenly a huge weight fell on my body .. I could not breathe it was so heavy I tired to push it , pick it up nothing happened. Felt like I was being crushed ... after about 2 mins struggle I used my hands to push this second weight near my neck .. it felt like a human I felt a face .. I might have applied pressure in the right place or something it let me go .. As if it fell down from my bed .. then I woke up ran to my door held the door knob .. there was a hand holding my hand preventing me from twisting the knob open .. I tried to scream. I never used so much r energy to scream . I don't even think a pregnant woman would scream as much as I did .. No matter how much I screamed .. there was no sound coming out of me .. I wrestled it. Then felt an arm on neck. So it's like it grabbed me from behind .. one hand on my hand holding the knob other is on my neck .. I tried kicking it . I elbowed it on the head . Then with my legs planted strong on the floor . I was hanging my whole weight from the knob trying to break it .. I could then slightly get the door all this happening while it was trying to pull me back .. I could see my living room .. I screamed for my mom there was no sound coming out of me . There were tears coming from my eyes .. Then I felt a hand close my mouth ... I thought I was going to die due to suffocation that day .. then I just opened my mouth and bite his hand that was covering my mouth ... Then boom.. there was a black flash .. I woke up on my bed .. as if nothing happened .. I was breathing heavily I was sweating .. When I tried to get off the bed to get some water . My whole body was sore. Like I just had a wrestling match with khabib .. I got up .. switched the light one .. There multiple prints of my feet on the wall near the door .. I was dumb folded ... My mom asked me did u kick the wall or something when she was cleaning it. Never told anyone. But I needed to share this. Thanks (Reddit)

First, sleep paralysis is not always associated with the visits of spirits. It is a state of consciousness just before or after sleep. The soul goes in an out-of-body-state but remains conscious. In that state it does not have any or little control over the physical body.

Here we will only speak about sleep paralysis with a direct presence of spiritual entities.

Spirit visitations can cause sleep paralysis to occur, often accompanied with a heavy feeling on the chest. It is a way for a spirit to have control over the person while it is sucking the vital energy out of him. It is not unusual for the person to see the spirit on top of him, often in a frightening form, as the spirit likes to induce fear, making it easier to suck the life force. Sometimes only the presence of the spirit is felt. The appearance of the spirit or entity varies depending on culture and personal beliefs. For example, the entity can be seen as an old hag, a demon, a shadow being.

In a typical sleep-paralysis episode, a person wakes up paralyzed, senses a presence in the room, feels fear or even terror, and may hear buzzing and humming noises, or see strange lights. A visible or invisible entity may even sit on their chest, shaking, strangling or prodding them. Attempts to fight the paralysis are usually unsuccessful. It is reputedly more effective to relax, or try to move just the eyes or a single finger or toe in order to wake up. The attack of the spirit is on the vital body of the person, not the physical body. When the person's consciousness shift from the out-of-body state to the in-body state, the attack stops.

The effort to move a single toe or finger is also used by out-of-the-body experiencers when they end up in a perilous situation in the astral world, and they want to return immediately to the physical body.

13. Are UFOs Spaceships?

When I was a child I lived in Beveren, a small town which is now part of the city of Roesalare, in Belgium. In the winter of 1944, I often saw Hitler driving by in his car as he used to visit Beveren frequently at that time (there was a German car factory in Beveren). My mother was sick during this winter, so I had to do all the errands because I was the oldest of the five children. One dark evening I went, once more, to the farm of the Sommers family to get milk. I was walking down the main road, when suddenly I noticed a strange swift movement from behind the hedge of the Belgian cemetery, which is next to the German cemetery. It was a strange vehicle of a silvery, metallic color and partially transparent, hovering about one meter (three feet) about the road (see fig. 1a and 1b). First I thought that Hitler had gotten a new car, a round car without wheels. Red, blue, yellow and white colors were flashing from this vehicle; also inside were colored lights. It had three light sources underneath emanating a dazzling light towards the road. It made a strange zooming sound, but not like a car engine. I noticed one dark being inside, but things were going too quickly to make out any details. It was also too close to me and moving too fast. As soon as I realized that the thing was really weird, I became frightened and jumped into a patch of tall stinging nettles beside the road. When the vehicle passed and flew into a field, it dissolved at the spot. It didn't even stop, it just vanished. (Diane Duurland, a friend of the author of this text)

UFOs, both light spheres and flying saucers have been observed in their movements, and show that they are under intelligent control, although this might be quite different from what we would expect. UFOs undulate, flutter, or have a wobble motion. They hover in all kinds of positions. They dip up and down in a wavelike motion through the air. When descending, they can have a "falling leaf" pattern. They make right angle turns, and can avoid a head on collision with an airplane at the last moment.

Because they are not physical, UFOs can attain tremendous speeds and acceleration that no human pilot would ever survive. They can go from stand still to immense speeds in zero time, and come to a dead-stop too. Fleets of UFO's can fly in perfect formation at high speed.

But what are UFOs? Are they space vehicles or something else?

If you have read the previous chapters, you will have an idea that, in general, the UFO phenomenon we are dealing with are quite different from physical objects. UFOs is a term used for manifestations of light spheres and physical-looking spaceships. We know from historical sightings and the immense variety of metallic-looking ships that these are mere visible forms of an energy mass. Are at least some of them really ships of any kind? After all, the ufonauts, or the dimensional beings, like to portray themselves as occupants inside wooden ships (in past centuries), in wood-metallic zeppelin-like ships (in late 1800s, beginning 1900s) and in spaceships after that. There are also sightings by small children, who were not yet influenced by any media, who saw small saucer-shape like, multi-colored, vehicles. These vehicles are too small for any space flight, and besides, their multi-colored flashing lights are not necessary, unless they want to draw attention to themselves.

Too many light spheres have been seen splitting in two or more light spheres, or several light spheres joining into one. They can also change size and shape. Clearly they cannot be physical vehicles that we are familiar with. Some people have been invited aboard a spaceship and have seen of have been explained the propulsion system of the ship, ranging from mechanical flywheels to manipulation of light and energy. Every time it is a completely different explanation. What witnesses see is not always what it really is.

UFOs, or the dimensional vehicles, being comprised of higher-dimensional energy where the 'laws of nature' are different, do not obey our physical laws when appearing in our physical world. UFO means Unidentified Flying Object. They are not solid physical objects, and they don't fly. They don't fly from here to there using a propulsion system, such as rocket fuel or electric motors. They travel 'without moving', using the space/time continuum of their dimension. In scientific terms, the principle of non-locality. They are not subject to our physical laws, and thus they do not have to overcome inertia and gravity. That is why even the entities are seen gliding; and be here now, and be there a fraction of a second later.

I we look at it from the side of the dimensional beings themselves, then it is quite possible to speak of a 'vehicle' in the sense that this vehicle is an energy form shaped by the thoughts of the occupants. This can be any firm, from a sphere, to a tetrahedron, to a pyramid, to an oval, to a large saucer-like spaceship, all of which have been seen with or without beings inside.

It is necessary to understand the astral or etheric dimension so often explained in esoteric traditions, but also by people who have had out-of-the-body experiences, and by clairvoyants. In the etheric dimension, substance exists in a 'prima materia' form. It reacts to thought by the etheric beings. When a being in the etheric world thinks of something, then the etheric substance takes shape. Think of a tree, and the tree is formed right in front of you. Thus in the etheric dimensions, whole landscapes are formed this way, including, plant life, rocks, mountains, and even houses and cities. All by the thoughts of people who live there. Part of the etheric dimensions is the so-called after-life of humans, where we go after we die. Most deceased souls recreate what they knew here on Earth. But in these dimensions there are also other kinds of beings who have created their own worlds, by their thoughts. All these etheric creations or forms will last as long as one's (sub)consciousness maintains it. When you leave your etheric house behind to go somewhere else, than this etheric house will slowly disintegrate back into the 'prima materia' substance.

In the etheric world it is possible to create a vehicle too. Multiple beings can combine their energies and create a larger or more complex vehicle by their thoughts. They can move such a vehicle-form to travel together through space/time. They can also create 'instruments' inside the ship that can perform specific manipulations of energy. This would allow them to control the ship, or energy form, in specific ways, and to direct specific energies, such as light beams to witnesses to cause trance states and paralysis. When such an etheric vehicle is 'lowered' in frequency, it appears in our physical dimension. To us it appears as a light sphere, because of its intense energy. Energy in the etheric dimensions is much more intense, or more dense, than in our physical world. What to us looks like a ball of light, looks to the etheric beings as a well-defined physical ship. So, we see them flying around as light spheres, but the occupants see themselves as being in their (self-created) vehicle. If desired they can manipulate the energy of their vehicle to become visible, and then it looks to us as a metallic spaceship. We always have to remind ourselves that what we see is not always what we think it is. The energy of the vehicle can be densified in such a way that it gains weight, as to leave impressions in the soil or even collide with physical objects in our world, in some rare cases.

If we put aside the many stories about abductees who were carried into spaceships revealed by hypnosis, which are unreliable as the mind can easily make up things, then we still have enough accounts of people who could consciously remember that they were transported on board of what looks like a flying saucer. The details they give of the interior and the beings involved are enough to conclude that there are indeed such vehicles that are used by the dimensional beings to appear in our world. It is difficult to figure out if those vehicles are indeed what they look like, or if there are induced mental experiences.

14. Portals

When we see an anomalous light in the sky we call it a UFO, but in most cases we just don't know what its exact nature is. It could be a sphere of intense energy, or an energy ship (etheric vehicle) piloted by dimensional beings. But in some instances it also could be a portal. An energetically created dimensional doorway that directly connects two places, one here on the physical earth, and the other can be in another dimension, or maybe even on another planet somewhere in the universe. The two doorways are connected by way of a 'tunnel', an energetic link that looks like a tunnel but has characteristics different from the physical because the tunnel is actually present a link between two places. Outside the physical dimension the laws of nature are different. Time and space are not what we are familiar with, and on that level two places can be directly linked together, allowing travel from one place to another in no time.

A tunnel is often experienced by near-death-experiences. It allows the soul to go from its physical plane of reality to what we call the afterlife, but what is actually the astral dimensions. A tunnel can also be used by out-of-the-body-experiencers or astral travelers to go from one dimension to another, or from one place to another in the same dimension.

There is not much information available about dimensional vehicles, or UFOs, using portals to enter our physical world, aside from much speculation. I assume that only the more advanced beings are using this method of entrance.

In Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp, Tom Gorman describes 'orange structures' would appear in the sky and seemed to hover low over the cottonwood trees about a mile away from his ranch. he looked at them with a scope on a night-vision rifle. One night, he could see a blue sky through one of these structures. He also discovered that as he approached the orange structure it would fade and be invisible when he was closeby. It appeared to be a tunnel that could only be seen fully when perfectly in line with its axis, and this happened to be right on his ranch. On another night, he could see a black triangular object moving through the tunnel and entering our world.

Unfortunately I don't have the link to the website of a clairvoyant, who wrote an article about certain sightings of intense bright lights in the sky coming out of a small circle or point. There was much speculation about it being the result of some rocket experiments, but this clairvoyant said that some of them were actually big portals being opened, and the visible light was actually light from the world at the other end of the portal shining through into our world.

I would also recommend reading my Wordpress post of the Centaurians, an astral experience of mine in which certain cosmic beings use a portal/tunnel to go from their world to ours, be it only on the astral plane.

It is said that cryptic animals also use portals to enter our reality. There have been cases in which cryptic beings left tracks in the mud or snow that suddenly stopped as if the being vanished into thin air. In the book Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp, a rancher followed the tracks of cow in the snow, only to find that it suddenly stopped in the middle of a meadow. The cow had vanished, never to be seem again. Did it go through a portal to another dimension, or to another planet?

15. Positive Encounters

Although this text is primarily about the negative consequences of the intrusion of dimensional beings in our lives, we should also mention that sometimes higher, spiritually evolved beings do appear or intervene in a positive way in the lives of certain people. Usually this is for the purpose of teaching or broadening the awareness of the person, for healing, or to avoid an unnecessary catastrophic accident.

Here are an example:

September 11, 2018 I was in Hospice at St Francis Hospital with spinal meningitis; 108 degree fever, acquired from a suspected air conditioning vent. After an 11 hour back surgery to take out my L5 and 6, which was broken in half and pieces of bone floating through my spinal cord, I suffered a heart attack and saw with my eyes open several young people in white helping me. I saw them all with my eyes wide open and noted the clock go *from 6:00 PM to 6:00 AM. I asked my nurse, who came in with her blue issued work scrubs, who were the people in white and she said she never seen anyone in white or in my room, at anytime. I left the hospice after 2 months, after my X-Ray MRI revealed my L5 and 6 miraculously had been replaced by an hour-glass cartilage and my fever was gone. I was studied for a year by several doctors and specialist and as far it was explained to me that the extreme high fever I had for months had possibly stimulated the cartilage growth formulating an hourglass spine, and the conclusion was only the hand of God could have knitted me back perfectly back to full health. ## 16.1. Advanced Capabilities

I could have used the term 'teleportation' as this is a more familiar term. However 'displacement' also covers other means of moving something from one place to another. Teleportation is a science fiction term, and it doesn't describe what method is used. There might be more than one method to move something from A to B in a manner unknown to us. As you will see below, there is also the possibility that one finds himself at another location without a sudden teleportation method.

These anomalous displacements are a clear sign of superior technology that the advanced dimensional beings have. In most cases this can only be attained by the manipulation of matter and energy, and a vast understanding of space, time and dimensions.

The dimensionals have demonstrated again and again that they can take anything and anyone at a moment's notice and deposit it or him at any other place in a fraction of a second. Weight or size of the object or person doesn't matter. They can also do this with utter precision.

Some of these actions are for their own purposes, and elude our understanding. Other actions are taking as part of their fear inducing tactics.

This displacement ability is a sign and sometimes a show of their superiority over us. We don't have these capabilities nor do we have the means to prevent them.

16.2. The Cookie Cutter

Five hundred yards west, he showed us two circular, deep holes in the ground where soil had been removed. Tom had found several of these deep indentations, usually following a night of flying lights. The holes were about a foot deep and several feet in diameter. They sloped downward from the edges. I guessed that two or three hundred pounds of soil would have had to be removed from the ground in order to make those holes. I asked Tom if he had found soil nearby. He shook his head. He explained that the first time he had seen the holes, they had perfectly straight sides, as if a giant cookie cutter had dug in and removed the soil and grass. Over time, he explained, weathering and rain had blurred the precise cuts of the holes. Now, with grass beginning to grow, the holes looked obvious, but less than spectacular. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

This is a little known but also baffling phenomenon, baffling at least to the scientists who cannot explain it, although they come up with various unproven theories.

A piece of dirt, grass and all, is cut out of the landscape with sharp and precise cuts, and placed a little distance further, or not found at all. The total weight of the chunk can be in the tons. The chunk has been cut at a certain depth horizontally or flat, in one cut. This is something nobody can do. Bear in mind, when the chunk is found nearby it is in one piece.

Traces of footprint, machinery or anything else are never found. The ground around is undisturbed.

In one instance some dirt dribblings were found between the hole and the chunk nearby. These dribblings were in an arc. So the whole piece, weighing tons, had moved up and then floated in an arc to its final resting place, and then put upside down.

There is no way that this can be done with mechanical means.

The quote above is from the Skinwalker ranch in Utah, the site of a lot of UFO, monster and paranormal activity. I wonder if other cutter cookie cases are also associated with UFOs. Unfortunately, people tend to focus only on their finds and don't investigate any other strange activity that might have been going on in the area.

I think the cookie cutter events are activities by the dimensional beings, those who have the advanced energy-technology to pull off a feat like that. The question is: what is the purpose of cutting out these soil patches? Are they looking for something underneath? When the soil is missing totally, did they take it with them? Small pieces of soil might serve as samples.

On Skinwalker ranch large amount of dirt were scooped out of a pasture. No marks around. So what are these beings doing with the dirt? What do they need it for?

There is not much else to say about this phenomenon. There are probably many more cases that are never reported, because most people would find it a little puzzling but not worth to mention it to anybody.

It seems that somebody with a totally different technology is cutting into the earth, and transporting the soil to where they need it.

Maybe there are some beings who really come here to scoop up dirt, and even suck up water. Water is essential to life forms as we know it. Maybe some of the UFOs are piloted by physical beings who come from somewhere else. Or can dimensional beings also transport water to their dimension? I have found a couple of stories of UFOs sucking up water. Here is one from Brazil:

Three shrimp fishermen in a boat were about two miles out to sea off the coast near Iguape, forty-five miles southeast of Fortaleza in Ceara. It was dark and the men saw a bright light approaching them on the horizon. "It was so low they thought it was a ship that was going to collide with them," said investigator Reginaldo Athayde, citing a report submitted by Colonel Liberato Andrade, who interviewed the fishermen. "They pulled their sail down to slow their boat to avoid a collision, but when the ship approached their boat they realized it wasn't a ship. It was a UFO with a lot of lights on it. It was sucking water up into it and passed slowly within twenty meters of the boat, but the fishermen don't think the UFO saw them. It just went by them about six meters above the water, sucking up a column of water almost as wide as the UFO. The water didn't fall back into the ocean. The UFO went past them and disappeared in the distance." (UFO Danger Zone by Bob Pratt)

Ingo Swann in his book Penetration (chapter 10) describes a rather impressive event he witnessed of a UFO appearing out of nowhere above a lake and sucking up water.

16.3. Poltergeist

Poltergeist are cases in which many different paranormal activities happen. One of them is the displacement of objects. These are usually household objects, but they can also be garden tools and the like. Poltergeist cases are usually studied from the point of view of paranormal affects, and the implied presence of malevolent spirits. But in UFO and monster cases poltergeist phenomena are known too, especially in those cases where UFO entities want to drive the occupants out of their home. Displacement of objects is one of their favorite games to instill a mounting frustration and fear that violates any sense of privacy and safety.

Common household object will suddenly have disappeared, and will show up in another room, or even outside the house. Usually the investigators call it dematerialization and materialization of the object. The term 'aport' is also used. Sometimes it is an object that one really needs, giving rise to a lot of aggravation. In some cases work that has been done is undone, such as unpacking groceries or stacking wood.

Another example of displacement of objects are the 'stone rains' in some poltergeist cases. Stones, small to large, appear out of nowhere and rain down on a house, and sometimes inside the house. They just appear (materialize) near the ceiling or window. Obviously these stones have to come from somewhere, and in some cases they came from an area outside the house. Some entity 'teleported' these stones to a place above the house or inside.

These poltergeist cases usually appear after sightings of UFOs, orbs and monsters. It is a way to ramp up the fear level.

I suspect that the displacement and other poltergeist activities are caused by a lower echelon of dimensional spirits who are used by the more intelligent ones who need the area for their own activities, and they don't want any people around.

16.4. Animals

On the afternoon of April 2, Tom and Ellen had set off toward the west end of the ranch on a routine mission to spot and count the animals. As they passed the bull enclosure, both of them looked fondly and proudly at the four burly bulls in the corral. They truly were magnificent beasts, two each of pure black Simmental and Black Angus, each weighing more than two thousand pounds. With muscles rippling healthily beneath the shiny black coats that perfectly reflected the setting afternoon sun, the animals made the Gormans proud. Ellen said wistfully, "I would go out of my mind if I lost any of those animals." Tom nodded in agreement as they drove west on the narrow dirt track past the corral. Forty-five minutes later they drove back. All the animals seemed to be accounted for, yet they could not shake that nagging feeling of unease. An unnatural calm hung over the property, broken only by the sound of the truck engine. Abruptly Ellen screamed and pointed out the windshield. Tom hit the brakes, fearing he was about to run over something. He followed her finger and gasped. The corral was empty. Tom's stomach knotted. Each of those four registered bulls was worth thousands of dollars. They were irreplaceable. Tom looked into Ellen's tear-stained face. They stopped the truck by the empty corral, and he got out to search for some evidence that the four magnificent animals could have left behind. Tom's knees felt weak. There was no sound as he walked around the corral. Tom walked around looking at the footprints in the corral. The animals had been there only forty-five minutes ago. Ellen was sobbing in the truck. His search meandered over to an old small white trailer located at the west end of the corral. There was no entrance to the trailer from the corral except a door that was tightly locked and hadn't been opened in years. As he passed the trailer he glanced in. Tom froze. All four animals were standing silently, crammed into the tiny space. They seemed frozen hypnotically and appeared to be barely conscious. Tom, with relief flooding through his veins, yelled loudly for Ellen. At the same time he banged forcefully on the side of the metal trailer. The noise seemed to break the silent spell. Instantly, all four animals appeared to wake up. They began kicking and bellowing to get out of the narrow, confined space. Within seconds the four huge animals went berserk and devastated the interior of the trailer. Finally, a metal door was kicked out and instantly all four animals tumbled blindly out the broken door and began stampeding in a panic. (Hunt for the Skinwalker, by Colm A. Kelleher and George Knapp)

This is an exceptional example of how the dimensional beings, who were involved in the many strange events on the Skinwalker Ranch (in Utah), are able to listen in to our conversations, and on a moments notice they can take an animal from one place and deposit it in another place. Not only that, but to place four large heavy weight bulls inside a small closed trailer is quite a feat. The bulls obviously were first put into a trance so they were not even aware about what was happening to them. It is like child's play to those beings. Because the trailer was locked, and there were still extensive cobwebs on the inside of the door when inspected, the bulls must have been taken out of our reality and then put back inside the trailer. In other words, a kind of teleportation.

The owners of the ranch had another episode where a calf was mutilated while they were only a short distance away. Nothing was seen or heard. The only way it could have happened was that the calf was taken out of this world, mutilated and then put back, in a silent and unseen way.

There is a lot of evidence in cattle and other animal mutilation cases, that the animals have not been butchered at the spot. Instead, they have been taken away, be it taken out of our dimension, or beamed up into a flying saucer, where the animal is then drained of blood and mutilated, and then brought back. That explains why there is never a single drop of blood at the scene itself. Some mutilated, and even non-mutilated, cows have been found with broken legs, suggesting that they were dropped from an altitude. There is even a case of a mutilated cow found on top of an electricity pole. You can find the picture on the web.

Some times cows and other farm animals and even pets, especially dogs, have disappeared completely during UFO and monster sightings. On the Skinwalker Ranch three of their dogs seem to have been incinerated considering the find of three burned spots where the dogs were last seen. But overall animals are never seen again. They must have been displaced to an unknown location, wherever that might be. If they teleported these animals, what do they do with them? Over the last half century many thousands of cows and other animals have disappeared this way. If they were just displaced to another location on this planet, they would have been found by somebody. Cows but also other animals that are raised for profit are tagged with an identification system.

There have been cattle mutilations in which internal organs were missing without any necessary cuts to the body. In other words they could not have been removed with ordinary means, like surgery. They were removed through a method of dematerialization, teleportation, or displacement, whatever term you like. I think these anomalous removals of internal organs are meant to instill even more fear into the farmer. In my opinion animal mutilations have no other function than to instill fear. "Look what we can do to you."

16.5. Humans

This is a vast topic and I can only give an overview here.

I have collected many stories of people who are at a certain place, and suddenly find themselves at another without any memory of how they have arrived there. You can read them in my article of Missing Time: Has It Ever Happened To You?

There is a wide variety in these experiences. Some of these cases are associated with sightings of UFOs, but there are many more without any other abnormal experience. These people have no known involvement of aliens in their lives. They are normal people going about their normal lives.

A driver leaves home on a three hour journey, and arrives at his destination 10 minutes later. Somehow he has been transported through space over a vast distance in an eye blink. Sometimes he doesn't remember anything unusual, but in other cases, there is sense of going into a trance before it happened, or coming out after it happened. But any memory of what happened is absent.

A driver leaves home, is on the road, and suddenly 'wakes up' and find himself at a totally different part of town, on another road, or even going into the opposite direction. Such a driver often finds himself 'displaced', disoriented, and sometimes has to find his way back to the familiar route. Usually it is many hours later, and then it is possible that he was put into a trance and someone else took over driving the car to another location. But the amount of time elapsed far exceeds the time necessary to go to this other location. So what happened in this time period. If he was sitting in his car in a trance for several hours, it would have been noticed by other drivers or pedestrians, who would have stopped to investigate or call the police.

Are these people 'teleported' to another dimension, and then put back?

I gave the example of a driver as this seems to happen a lot. But these dislocations also happen frequently inside one's home, or to bikers or walkers. One moment one is doing a chore, the next moment the person is at another place in the house just standing there when 'waking up', unable to recall what happened. Here too, the time span can be many hours.

There are many different scenarios in which people cannot remember what happened during these displacement in space. Some are fairly simple, but others are far out, like a woman who was missing for three day, but she didn't experience any break in her activities. Clearly she was displaced somewhere else during that period, because the place she was was thoroughly searched by family members.

That brings us also to the now famous mysterious 411 missing people cases, of which David Paulides has written so much. When only a couple of hours elapse, it isn't reported to the police, and we rarely hear those stories. Only when people go missing for longer periods of time will it be reported to the police. Children have been missing from inside the house, and found again in the same room they were in, although that room and the entire house were thoroughly searched. The child itself wasn't aware of anything, and didn't hear the frantic screams of the family members, nor saw them in his room. Where were they during the missing hours?

In short, the advanced dimensional entities have the capabilities of putting people into a trance, removing people from our physical world, and put them (cars included) safely at another place, in an instant or at a later time, and also wiping any memory of the event.

Next question is: do they also 'displace' people to other dimensions, underground caves or even other planets without bringing them back?

16.6. Portals

How do the dimensional beings displace an object, animal or human? One possibility could be the creation of an artificial portal around them, and this makes matter vibrates at a higher 'frequency', thereby creating a method of transport into a higher dimension. In this higher dimension, moving from one location to another is instantaneous (non-locality). Then a second artificial portal bring the atoms back to its normal physical state, and the object, animal or human appears at the second location.

Having such an ability or technology is a tremendous advantage.

It would also explain why tracks of cryptic animals, or entities, suddenly appear or disappear in the snow or mud. These beings are led out into our world by the higher dimensionals, and when they have fulfilled their purpose they are made to enter such a portal again to take them out of our world again.

Of course, the same applies for the sudden appearance and disappearance of UFOs or light spheres, although they also have the ability to make themselves invisible.

17. Primitive Behavior

Before Hermelindo could move, however, the creature swiftly slipped a hook around Hermelindo's left ankle and scurried back up one of the cables into the UFO. Hermelindo fell down but was immediately yanked off the ground and began to be reeled up toward the hole in the bottom of the UFO, feet first. (UFO Danger Zone, Bob Pratt)

In the book UFO Danger Zone, Bob Pratt details a rather bizarre abduction attempt case (in Brazil) in which the occupants tried to abduct a resisting victim by lowering cables with hooks. A struggle with a short humanoid broke out who managed to put one of the hooks into the victim's foot, by which he was hoisted up. His brother-in-law saw him fall down from the UFO as the victim was able to release himself from the hook.

Are these 'aliens' supposed to be very advanced extraterrestrials with superior technology? It rather looks like they sometimes resort to extreme primitive measures, not to mention their own low consciousness and morals/ethics towards the human race. By itself this event was a unique case, but it shares the primitive nature of a lot of 'aliens' with many other cases.

In my opinion the man was drawn up to the UFO through a light beam. There have been several accounts where this was the case. The fact that he saw the cable and hooks was probably a mental manipulation, making him see the cables but these were not a reality. Nevertheless it is kind of a sadistic game they play.

There was another such case in Brazil in which a man was pulled up with a hook. While he was thus hanging upside down he saw people through a window of the vehicle, and one of them said : "Here is a good old man we can take with us to our earth". He was then dropped. Is this just low consciousness toying with a human? Did they really mean that they sometimes abduct a human to their own place somewhere in the universe? Or is it all just a cruel joke? These entities don't need hooks to capture or abduct people; they have much more effective ways to accomplish this. So after all, it was most likely a rather cruel display to entertain themselves.

In another Brazilian case (from the above mentioned book), three friends went fishing one night when a light appeared. They went to seek shelter under a tree.

The UFO quickly reappeared over the tree, and this time he and his two friends had to stay under the tree the rest of the night. "Every time we started to go out from underneath the tree, the object would circle around and shine a red light down on us," Manoel said. "We'd go back under the tree and the light would go out. It was like the thing was playing with us. It disappeared about four-thirty in the morning."

This is a cat and mouse game. Also cruel and unnecessary.

Brazil seems to be a bad place for low consciousness ufonaut behavior. Maybe the dimensional beings who live over there are an exceptional bad group, unless there are other countries where such cases are not reported or investigated. The thing that ties all these cases in Brazil together is that the UFOs suddenly appear overhead in a blaze of light without warning, nearly always find their victims in the dark, and then chase them. Whether the UFOs actually intend to catch them is questionable, given their ability to snatch people at will, but the victims feel certain they're being chased.

The UFO's actions sometimes are outright sadistic. In the following example, the man was zapped countless times for three hours with a light beam. It's like a vicious person tormenting a helpless being that can't get away.

"Suddenly I felt a strange beam of light on my back," Chico Gama said as Jean interpreted. "I looked up and saw a violet-colored object with a red light, and I felt very cold, the way I feel when I open an icebox. I was very afraid, and I ran across the beach and hid under some coconut trees. The object chased me and stopped over the trees. Then it shined a light down on me, trying to get me." For the next three hours the UFO played a cruel game with him. Every five minutes or so it would shine the red light down at his hiding place. "Every time the light hit me, I would feel very cold and dizzy, almost to the point of passing out," Chico Gama said. "It made a strange humming sound every time. This happened many times. When daylight came, it went away. I ran home and hid under my bed. I was very sick, very weak. For several days I felt that way."

Brazil has many cases in which people were hurt, burned, got sick, got permanently disabled and even died as a result of their exposure to UFOs. However we find this the world over, although to a lesser extent. The dimensionals have been on this planet for a long time, and have been appearing to people for many centuries. They certainly know that the radiation their presence gives off, through the light orbs, light beams or through the cryptic beings, does harm to humans and animals. They also mutilate and kill animals. Although we cannot prove it many animals and people have probably been permanently abducted. What happens to them?

They rarely speak, and when they do communicate, the conversation is short, often meaningless and contradictory, and they lie too.

They appear without warning, they stalk, they scare, they invade our lives and privacy, they appear in our bedroom and mess with our mind.

Did I forget anything?

I think you are getting it by now. Of course I am talking about a certain group of dimensional beings. The nature elementals are what they are, nor good, nor bad, but they don't know the difference between life and death. There are dimensional beings who are totally not interested in human beings, and they rarely have contact with us. But there is a certain group that does care about our well-being. I have hinted at their identity and their motives.

At the same time, humanity, in general, is not much better. Look around and you know what I mean. It is not only our leaders who like to wage war, and do other unsavory things, but it is also our neighbors and even family members who have not been educated to be true, loving human beings.

Some people think that the 'aliens', or the Fairies, are much more spiritually advanced, but their actions do not show that at all. Just as with humans, some are better or worse than others. The advantage that they have is that they can appear in our world whenever they want, harm us, and then disappear back into their world, without us being able to prevent it, or go after them.
